Prison for child sex offences from 23 years ago

By Chrissie Daniels
chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A MAN has been jailed for three years after being found guilty of sexually abusing a child in the 1980s.

Kevin Hunt, 56, of South Park Road, was sentenced before Maidstone Crown Court on June 29 after being found guilty of six counts of indecent assault against a child.

The offences took place in New Ash Green, Longfield, between 1980 and 1989.

The victim came forward in February 2011 and Hunt was arrested, but denied the allegations.

Sentencing Hunt, His Honour Judge Joy said that Hunt's behaviour was "a disgraceful course of conduct".

Praising the bravery of the victim, Judge Joy said Hunt had made her go through an "utterly traumatic experience".

Investigating officer, Detective Constable Naomi Moore from Kent Police public protection unit, said: "This case highlights the importance of reporting sexual abuse; from no matter how long ago. In this case, the bravery of the victim in having the courage to come forward has helped jail a man for a significant period of time.

"I would urge anyone who has been a victim of sexual abuse and not reported it, or anyone who suspects abuse to be taking place, to report it to police and to be reassured that we will investigate it thoroughly and sensitively." Hunt has also been made the subject of a sexual offences prevention order, and will have to sign the sex offenders' register for ten years.

EDUCATION

Cadets presented with their diplomas at police ceremony

AN EDUCATIONAL charity celebrated the achievements of a group of cadets at the Kent Police headquarters in Maidstone last week.

The 35 air and army cadets, aged 13-15, were presented with their BTEC Level One Diplomas in Team Work and Personal Skills as part of their work with charity CVQO.

Family and friends watched the cadets receive their awards along with dignitaries including Michael Bax, the High Sheriff of Kent and Colonel James Partridge DL, representing the Lord Lieutenant of Kent. Local councillors and members of Kent Police also attended.

The army cadets were from all across Kent and the air cadets were from squadrons based in Sittingbourne, Faversham and Ramsgate.

CVQO, with the sponsorship of the Kent People's Trust, offered a group of 50 young people from the air, army and sea cadets the chance to earn the qualification for their activities. The charity provides opportunities for young people and volunteering adults to improve their education and work prospects with vocational qualifications.

CVQO trustee Lord Lingfield said: "It's not just the individual who benefits, there is huge potential impact on communities too.

"This is why the support from Kent People's Trust is so important – their commitment to this programme has allowed these young people to gain the CVQO-led Level 1 BTEC qualification."

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

THIS is the first picture of Kent-born actress Naomi Watts as Princess Diana, who went to school in the county.

The actress is currently filming a movie called Diana, which traces the final two years of the princess's life to her tragic death in a Paris underpass.

The mother of the future king, Prince William, she became known as the People's Princess, but her life always appeared complicated.

Affairs, controversy, TV interviews, books, and divorce all made headlines around the world before she was killed in a car crash, aged just 36.

Even the circumstances of the collision were subjected to rumour, claim and counter-claim between the Royals and millionaire Mohamed Al Fayed, father of her lover Dodi, who also died in the 1997 incident.

Watts, 43, was born in Shoreham, just six miles from Diana's school at West Heath, near Sevenoaks.

They share tragedy – the actress's father, Pink Floyd sound engineer Peter died from an apparent heroin overdose in 1974. Her parents had divorced when she was four and she was eventually taken to Australia.

After a series of edgy movies such as Mulholland Drive and The Ring, and blockbusters including King Kong, Watts was called in to take over the role of Diana after Jessica Chastain pulled out.

The film's working title is Caught in Flight, but it will be called Diana when it hits the big screen next year. Filming started last week and will continue in London and the south of England, but a movie insider believes Kent will not be a location. The crew will also be in Mozambique during the nine weeks of filming.

Watts has already been snapped in several of Diana's iconic outfits.

Filming has been taking place in Zagreb, Croatia, and it will be the first film to cover in detail Diana's death after being pursued by paparazzi.

On the set, Oscar-nominated Watts said of her part: "I'm excited and honoured to be playing the role of a remarkable woman, who had such a positive and profound impact in so many ways."

Previously, the actress had said: "She is a part of our history, an incredible woman and fascinating but a tragic ending."

"The film-makers came to me and it's a good script and it's very scary and I kind of wanted to say 'no' but I couldn't."

The director is Oliver Hirschbiegel who made Downfall, about the last days of Hitler.

Fellow Brit Naveen Andrews plays one of Diana's lovers Dr Hasnat Khan. Douglas Hodge and Juliet Stevenson, also star.

The filmmakers said Diana is a compelling portrait of the Princess of Wales during the final two years of her life. It charts how finding true personal happiness allowed her to achieve her defining successes, as she evolved into a major international campaigner and humanitarian.

Ecosse Films said: "We are very excited to be working with such a talented and creative team both in front of and behind the camera. Everyone's aim is to produce a truly insightful and compassionate study of Diana's later years."

ON FILM:

Princess Diana will be portrayed by Kent's Naomi Watts

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Rural eye on criminals

FARMERS and police have joined together to crack down on criminals targeting rural communities. It follows a rise in metal theft and incidents such as theft of agricultural vehicles, diesel and machinery. Farmers in east Kent have been joining officers on operations to act as the eyes and the ears of the rural community. It is being run as part of Country Eye, the Neighbourhood Watch-style support and information network for people living in the countryside.

➔ All-out attack on weeds

WEEDS on roads and pavements that enjoyed a growth spurt thanks to the wet weather are being tackled by Kent Highways which has begun an intensive spraying programme. A further spray will be undertaken in September and October with a special focus on targeting weed growth that has taken place since the first spray. This will help deal with the problems caused by the weather conditions, as well as restricting outbreaks in the next growing season.

➔ 5 Scots hit in Army cuts

THE Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders at Canterbury's Howe Barracks are to be moved to Scotland to carry out public duties. 5 Scots – as they are known – will be reduced to a public duties company and moved to Scotland. It is expected the 600-strong company will be reduced by 450 with the remaining 150 moved to perform ceremonial duties at Edinburgh Castle. The Princess of Wales Royal Regiment, also stationed at Howe, are not affected. It comes as part of a shake-up of the military which will see troop numbers cut by 82,000.

TRIBUTE

Death of DJ who loved 'beautiful Kent'

FORMER BBC Radio Kent and Radio 2 presenter, and founding member of commercial station Invicta, Don Durbridge has died. He was 73.

The radio veteran (pictured) first broadcast to the nation in 1955, aged 16, as co-host of the BBC Light Programme's Younger Generation. In 1974, he joined the Light Programme's successor, BBC Radio 2, as continuity announcer and newsreader. He was also a regular cover presenter stepping into the shoes of the likes of Terry Wogan, as well as hosting Family Favourites, Friday Night is Music Night, Night Ride, and Sport on 2.

Don also worked for many years for the forces' radio service, BFBS, including at the Munich Olympics in 1972 where he secured a worldwide scoop – an interview with swimmer Mark Spitz, who had won an unprecedented at the time seven gold medals at the Games.

Born in Glasgow in 1939 and raised in south London, Mr Durbridge's adopted home was "the beautiful county of Kent" as he called it.

In 1984, he was part of the launch team for the county's first commercial radio station, Invicta Sound. In the late 80s and early 90s he worked for BBC Radio Kent as presenter of Remember When, and was also the matchday announcer at Gillingham Football Club.

After a short time working in Malta, he returned to the UK in 1997 and found himself back among the golden oldies doing what he enjoyed most when he joined Saga's national digital service, hosting the late-night show, In Mellow Mood.

He emigrated to Spain in 2006. His final radio stop was with REM FM (now Talk Radio Europe). Mr Durbridge died after a short illness.

He is survived by his first wife, Yvonne, who lives in Margate, and also leaves a daughter, Moira, and a grandson, Teddy.

Foreign lorry tax could ease Stack woes – but Government won't help

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A SOLUTION to problems caused by the burden of lorry traffic is unlikely to go ahead in the near future unless ministers agree to part with funds from the proposed foreign lorry tax.

Cabinet member for highways at Kent County Council, Cllr Bryan Sweetland, said the Government had a moral duty to help with a resolution.

But the Department for Transport told KoS this week the county would "definitely not" get any of the funds.

The DfT spokeswoman added: "This is just not something that is being considered by the Treasury at the moment."

Fresh calls have been made for the Government to reconsider funding a solution to Operation Stack and the knock-on effects of the thousands of HGVs that pass through the county every day going to and from the Continent.

It comes exactly a year after a high-level summit was held in Folkestone which concluded with the promise that a solution would be found at the end of 2011.

Folkestone MP Damian Collins, Dover MP Charlie Elphicke, and representatives from the county council, fire service and police, met to find a "serious and workable" answer.

At the end of discussions, Mr Collins said he was due to meet with ministers to propose that a solution to Operation Stack should be part of the national infrastructure and that a resolution would be found by the end of the year.

But despite two options on the table – one for a lorry park near Aldington and the other for a network of parks along the M20 and by Dover – nothing can be done due to lack of funding and the Government's refusal to help.

Despite the announcement earlier this year that foreign hauliers could be charged to use UK roads, ministers refused to agree to set aside any of the money for Kent even though county leaders have for years been calling for such a tax.

Around 87 per cent of all international road haulage that comes into the UK arrives through Dover and the Channel Tunnel, travelling on the M20 and M2.

When the port is closed due to bad weather or disruption, Operation Stack is implemented and lorries park up on the M20 between Hythe and Cheriton and, in the worst cases, also between Ashford and Maidstone – causing huge delays and gridlock in the surrounding areas which cost the UK haulage industry £1 million a day and put businesses off investing in east Kent.

The management of Operation Stack is also expensive for Kent Police and the Highways Agency, with the bill running into the millions.

Cllr Bryan Sweetland said the Government should give Kent some of the money made from the proposed lorry tax on "moral grounds".

"Projections are some £25m a year could be made through this foreign lorry charge," he said.

"If half of that went to KCC or the Highways Agency a solution to when Operation Stack is in place could be found.

"This could either be a lorry park or smaller parks with facilities. But whatever option we pursue, we still need to find funding otherwise it's not possible.

"We've been calling for a foreign lorry tax for years. The Department for Transport has a moral responsibility to Kent seeing as nine out of 10 lorries come through here."

Cllr Sweetland said there were far-reaching problems associated with lorries, not just gridlock, including drivers using people's gardens as toilets.

Earlier this year, KoS reported that people living in Ashford had found human waste in their gardens. One unfortunate resident even caught a lorry driver in the act.

Cllr Sweetland said: "We know the problems associated with the lack of facilities and so it's important something is done.

"But we can't do this ourselves. This really comes down to contributions from all the agencies who benefit from a solution, such as the police.

"The Government has got to help; Kent came up with the foreign lorry tax plan and shoulders the burden of lorries – there is a moral responsibility there from DfT."

CRIME

Farmer's crop crushed as off-road fuel thieves target overnight lorries

FUEL thieves are sneaking up on unsuspecting lorry drivers under the cover of darkness and siphoning diesel out of their tanks.

Police said there had been a spate of fuel thefts from lorry drivers who park up in lay-bys near the M2 and M20 motorway network in east Kent, prompting officers to step up patrols on major routes.

But it's not just drivers and the freight industry suffering; farmers are complaining of damaged crops where thieves go off-road in a bid to go unnoticed as they approach their target.

Sellindge farmer Richard Price, from R Price and Sons, said thieves cut across the fields in four-wheel drive vehicles and recently destroyed his crop of oilseed rape.

"Last week was the second time it happened, but there's not much we can do about it," he said.

"Crops get flattened; they squash them to the ground. I don't really know how much damage there is yet as it makes you feel worse going and looking at what they've done.

"The thieves target lorries that have come from the Continent as fuel is cheaper over there so the vehicles are more likely to have a full tank. "I know one driver who had 600 litres stolen."

Mr Price said the thieves strike during the night when lorry drivers are asleep, taking a break before they head off around the country the next day.

Kent Police said they have stepped up patrols around key routes.

Det Chief Insp Matthew Long said: "We have had reports of theft of fuel from lorries parked near the motorway network in east Kent. As a result we have increased patrolling around the major routes and circulated leaflets to drivers."

The freight industry admitted it was feeling the pressure from fuel thefts.

James Hookham, managing director of the Tunbridge Wells based Freight Transport Association, said he was aware of the problem.

"It has obviously escalated with the price of diesel; as it has increased so has the number of incidents with fuel being stolen from trucks," he said.

"There is no doubt it is a real problem for truck drivers, and most importantly once again highlights the problem in east Kent which has a definite lack of adequate, secure HGV parking facilities which are urgently needed in the area."

Police said investigations were continuing and appealed to anyone with information to contact officers on 101 or call Kent Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

Get set to tell Government why an airport is too costly, not wanted, and would destroy marshes

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THIS month should – if we take the Government's word for it – see the launch of the long-awaited aviation consultation.

The Department for Transport told this newspaper just weeks ago that the anticipated aviation paper and subsequent consultation will start "before the summer".

Taking into account Parliamentary recess, that should mean in the next few weeks. But no firm date has been set, leaving people living in north Kent waiting, yet again, for a review that should have happened nearly four months ago.

This week there have been reports that a final decision on whether to build an airport in the Thames Estuary or expand Heathrow would not be made until after the general election in 2015, to avoid a fight between the Coalition parties.

This has been denied, however, by the Department for Transport. But it only goes to highlight the uncertainty that has been hanging for years over people living on the Hoo Peninsula.

CONTINUING THE FIGHT:

Joan Darwell, campaigner from Friends of the North Kent Marshes, said for her it had been going on for a decade.

"It's just going on and on – we have it hanging over us all the time," she said. "We've been through all this before. This doesn't just affect people living on the Hoo Peninsula, this affects so many more living in villages and around the Medway stretch.

"People are getting scared, they think this is getting serious. When we were fighting the Cliffe plan people were scared to bury their loved ones in the church there. It's happening again and it's terrible to see.

"We're just hoping politicians will see sense and stop this.

"This estuary airport plan could end up running on for years. People living here live in uncertainty, it's very unfair."

She added: "For Friends of the

What are your views on the airport proposals? Share your opinion by writing to Airport Campaign, Apple Barn, Hythe Road, Smeeth, Ashford, Kent TN25 6SS, or email editorial@kosmedia.co.uk and put 'airport' in the subject. You can sign the petition at www.stopestuaryairport.co.uk

North Kent Marshes it's never been about our homes, it's about the importance of this protected area and we will keep fighting to protect it."

The Department for Transport said it hoped to have a decision on a preferred option by 2013.

The Prime Minister recently hinted at a U-turn over plans for a third Heathrow runway despite, when in opposition, lambasting the Labour government for looking at the proposal.

Transport minister Justine Greening is opposed to Heathrow expansion as are a number of other senior Tories and Mayor of London, Boris Johnson, who is championing the estuary airport plan.

Many hope a decision on the future of aviation in the South East will be made as quickly as possible, but having already experienced a delay in the consultation, sceptical campaigners are not holding their breath.

Medway Council, which is against the estuary airport proposal, is already gearing up to respond to the aviation consultation.

Deputy leader Cllr Alan Jarrett said: "We are awaiting the start of their consultation and we will put forward a full, frank and detailed response stating clearly why a Thames estuary airport is a complete non-starter.

"It is too costly; it is not wanted by a huge array of people – including some of the air industry's leading figures and City financiers; and it would needlessly devastate an area of global environmental importance.

"We know many others will also respond to the consultation stating their opposition and would urge your readers to do likewise when the consultation does start."

SECURITY

Survivor of London tube bombing fears for safety at Olympic Games

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A LONDON bombing survivor has revealed her fear of a terror attack during the Olympic Games seven years on from the devastating 7/7 atrocities.

Beverli Rhodes, from Kennington in Ashford, was one of the hundreds caught up in the tube and bus blasts on July 7, 2005.

Ironically she was on her way to a meeting about anti-terrorism and security at the Olympics, the day after London was announced as the host of the 2012 Games.

The 52-year-old, who was a senior project consultant in anti-terrorism at the time, was on the tube travelling between King's Cross and Russell Square when it was blown up by suicide bomber Germaine Lindsay. She was thrown forward and knocked unconscious and suffered serious chest, leg and facial injuries.

She continues to suffer from severe post-traumatic stress disorder, which forced her to give up her career in security.

LONG RECOVERY: Beverli Rhodes

Ms Rhodes said had she not been caught up in the blasts, she would have been working on the upcoming Olympics.

"I would have been part of the main team delivering security infrastructure. This is still very close to my heart," she said. "I'm worried about the Games and I hope to God that nothing happens.

"I know my former colleagues will have been working hard to thwart any attempts, but it's the rogue terrorists working alone who are not under any direction that I worry about.

"Security will have been watching all the right people but it's the rogue ones that slip through the net, that's the concern. You can't make a situation 100 per cent safe."

Ms Rhodes said on July 7, which falls this weekend, she will relive each moment of terror experienced seven years ago.

"It'll run through in my head what was happening at that specific time," she said.

"I do have flashbacks. I'm off medication now after six-and-a-half years and I'm learning to cope without it. It was for my walking and balance and also for post-traumatic stress disorder, which is an ongoing thing.

"I used to have horrific nightmares and awful outbursts of being upset. I came off the medication cold turkey in January. I needed to know that I could cope without it."

Ms Rhodes said while she will travel in London, she is still unable to use the underground and recently found herself having to quickly get off a train when she realised it would be going to King's Cross.

She now holds workshops for people suffering post-traumatic stress disorder, such as soldiers and rape victims, and helps them to create survival strategies.

"I can take something worthwhile from what happened by helping others," she said.

Another Kent victim was 28-year-old Philip Russell, from East Peckham, in Tonbridge, who died following the explosion on the number 30 bus at Tavistock Square.

He had been on his way to work at JP Morgan Asset Management in the City. His parents Grahame and Veronica have since set up a scholarship fund in his name at Kingston University, where their son spent four years.

COUNTRYSIDE

RSPB's warm welcome to forestry proposals

THE RSPB in Kent has welcomed an independent report urging the Government to ensure all public forests should remain in public hands.

The report was commissioned after controversial plans unveiled in March last year which proposed the sale of Forestry Commission land.

A number of sites in Kent would have been affected, among them King's Wood in Challock, near Ashford, and Bedgebury, in Goudhurst.

But the panel of experts examining the situation said the UK's forests were a national asset that play a vital role for people and wildlife, and should not be sold-off.

There had been fears the sale of such land would prevent access or encourage commercial operations. Steve Gilbert, conservation programme manager for RSPB South East, said:

"The South East is the most wooded part of England, with approximately 153,000 hectares of broadleaf native woodland, which is 61 per cent of the English total. If woodlands are healthy and well-managed they are one of our greatest natural assets."

Locked up for six child sex offences from the 1980s

A PAEDOPHILE has been jailed for three years after being found guilty of sexually abusing a child in the 1980s.

Kevin Hunt, 56, of South Park Road, Maidstone, was sentenced by Maidstone Crown Court after being found guilty of six counts of indecent assault against a child.

The offences took place in New Ash Green, Longfield, between 1980 and 1989.

The victim came forward in February, 2011, and Hunt was arrested but denied the allegations.

Sentencing, His Honour Judge Joy said that Hunt's behaviour was "a disgraceful course of conduct".

Praising the bravery of the victim, Judge Joy said Hunt had made her go through an "utterly traumatic experience". Investigating officer, Det Con Naomi Moore from Kent Police public protection unit said:

"This case highlights the importance of reporting sexual abuse; no matter how long ago it occurred. In this case, the bravery of the victim in having the courage to come forward has helped jail a man for a significant period of time.

"I would urge anyone who has been a victim of sexual abuse and not reported it, or anyone who suspects abuse to be taking place, to report it to police and to be reassured that we will investigate it thoroughly and sensitively."

Hunt has also been made the subject of a sexual offences prevention order, and will have to sign the sex offenders' register for 10 years.

CRIME

Estranged husband given 38 years after arson attack that killed his wife and son

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A USED-CAR salesman found guilty of murdering his wife and child in an arson attack has been jailed for 38 years.

Danai Muhammadi, 24, sprayed petrol through the letterbox of his estranged wife's home in Chatham Hill and set fire to it as they slept.

Melissa Crook, 20, and their 15-month-old son Noah died in the fire on September 10 last year. Her father – Mark Crook, 48, died later that week in hospital from severe injuries.

Two other people in the house at the time – Melissa's mother Amanda, 49, and her brother Bohdan, 21 – were able to escape to safety through upstairs windows. They suffered burns and injuries.

Muhammadi, of Brittainia Street, Coventry, was found guilty of three counts of murder and two of attempted murder.

During a six-week trial,

Maidstone Crown Court heard how Muhammadi drove with his girlfriend Emma Smith from Coventry to friend and co-defendant Farhad Mahmud's house in Maidstone.

Under the cover of darkness, Muhammadi and Mahmud then drove to Chatham, stopping on the way to fill a fuel canister and garden sprayer with petrol.

At around 2.15am they squirted petrol through the letter box. The petrol was ignited, and within minutes flames had engulfed the hallway and stairs of the property cutting off the family's escape route.

Door supervisor Mahmud, 35, of Fernhill Road, Maidstone, denied three counts of murder and two of attempted murder.

He was found guilty and was sentenced to 34 years.

Unemployed Smith, 22, formerly of The Barley Lea, Coventry, was sentenced to 14 years after being found guilty of the manslaughter of all three victims. She was found not guilty of the attempted murder charges.

Det Chief Inspector David Chewter, from the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate said: "This was one of the most tragic cases I have dealt with in 24 years of policing and my thoughts are with the Crook family who lost three generations of their close-knit family as a result of the fire which was deliberately set by someone they had welcomed into their family.

"The sentences reflect the severity of the charges and I hope the Crook family can now move on with their lives.

"They have been torn apart and will forever have to live with the consequences of the selfish actions of others."

Earlier this month, Amanda Crook spoke of her devastation.

She said: "We will never live there again. Never. We have no photographs, we've got no possessions. There are very few things we've managed to salvage: there's nothing of Melissa's, there's nothing of Mark's, there's nothing of mine, there's nothing of Bohdie's.

"We've got, really, nothing.

"The only thing I walked out that house with was my pyjamas which the police took, and my glasses, that was it."

Melissa and Muhammadi married in Rochester in 2009, and moved to Coventry, but the pair split and Melissa moved back in with her family in Kent with Noah in March, 2011.

PLANNING

New primary school would be a 'blight on the landscape'

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

PLANS for a new primary school would be a "blight on the landscape" according to countryside campaigners.

But Kent County Council has denied it is destroying a beautiful area of Benenden.

The Open Spaces Society, Britain's oldest national conservation body, said the plans need to be scrapped and it launched a bitter attack on KCC's proposal for a new primary school on open land in the Weald of Kent.

It said the idea was appalling as this is a prominent, elevated spot visible for miles around and will "suburbanise this attractive village" with the proposed lighting making it particularly intrusive.

There are three footpaths crossing the site, with one of them part of the High Weald Landscape Trail.

Kate Ashbrook, the society's general secretary, said: "We are opposed to the development of this highly-visible open land which is crossed by public footpaths.

"The buildings would blight the landscape of the High Weald Landscape Trail. We believe the new primary school should be sited in a less sensitive place."

But the council is adamant any impact will be minimal and will look in detail at the society's concerns.

The council said: "During the development of the design there were several public consultations; at the early stage when concept plans were presented, and more recently in June, 2011, when the detailed design was presented to the public in an exhibition in the village hall followed by an exhibition at the church.

"At that exhibition, there was overwhelming support for the proposal with 90 per cent of respondents supporting it.

"Kent County Council recognises the landscape value of the site; therefore careful consideration has been given to the landscaping and how the building fits into the site and its surroundings.

"As a consequence the proposed building has been partially set into the landscape to minimise its impact.

"Kent County Council is aware of the footpaths crossing this site, and it is proposed to divert the existing footpaths. If the application is approved, the diversions will be the subject of a separate application on conclusion of the planning process.

"The project is being considered for planning approval and this presents an opportunity for all to comment. The concerns raised by the Open Spaces Society will be considered as part of this process."

Groundbreaking 'lane rental' fees to ease peak-time roadwork delays

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

COMPANIES digging up busy roads could be forced to pay premium rates of up £2,000 a day during peak times.

The so-called 'lane rental' scheme aims to minimise disruption by making sure firms finish work on key routes as quickly as possible.

Highways chiefs at County Hall have begun consulting on plans and if given the green light will become the first county council in England to move forward with this type of scheme.

Cabinet member for environment, highways and waste at KCC, Cllr Bryan Sweetland, said the initiative was aimed at keeping disruption to drivers to a minimum.

"The lane rental scheme will also encourage these firms to work at less disruptive times," he added.

Charges would apply at certain times of day and at particular times of year in tourist areas or on school-sensitive routes.

Road closures would be charged at £2,000 and £1,600 a day, and lane closures would be £800, 400, £600, or £300 dependent on disruption caused and location. Revenue generated by the scheme would be invested in further work to cut congestion in Kent.

It follows the introduction two years ago of the Kent Permit Scheme, which requires companies to apply for permission to dig up a road.

This allows KCC to manage and co-ordinate works – getting firms to work at the same time instead of digging holes separately – minimising jams and delays suffered by motorists and other road users.

CONED OFF: Charges will vary

The permit scheme also allows the council to apply conditions on road works, such as increasing the number of gangs, lengthening the hours worked each day, restricting work to holiday periods, and working a seven-day week, to make sure the job gets done in the shortest possible time.

It has cut the duration of road works by one day in every 20, according to a report published into the scheme's first year.

For further information on the 12-week Kent Lane Rental scheme consultation go to www.kent.gov.uk/kentlane2012.

Bear jet-pack crossing beaten by bad weather

BEAR Grylls was set to cross the Channel using a water-powered jet pack on Thursday – but organisers had to call it off due to bad weather. The survival expert and chief scout was planning to become the first man to attempt the journey with the jets strapped to his feet. The attempt was to raise funds and awareness for the Scout Association. A spokesman for the Scouts said: "He has been beaten by the elements. It is a big disappointment." The spokesman said due to Grylls' filming commitments it was unclear when he would attempt the challenge again.

By Chrissie Daniels

A COUPLE who already have 11 children are expecting baby number 12 – and aren't ruling out the possibility of more in the future.

Tania and Michael Sullivan from Hoo, are well known for their brood after appearing in a Channel 4 documentary in January.

The couple have nine children between them: Caitlin, 12; Harry, nine; Eddie, seven; Sid, six; Paddy, five; Oliver, three; Joseph, one; and eight-month-old twins Anna and Libby.

Mrs Sullivan, 37, also has two children, Ben, 19, and Stephanie, 18, from a previous relationship.

Now Mrs Sullivan is 18 weeks pregnant with her 12th baby, due on December 2.

The couple, who have been married for 10 years, believe every pregnancy is a blessing, particularly after suffering eight miscarriages in the past.

Previous reports have suggested their reasons for having children were solely down to religion; Mr Sullivan is a Catholic and Mrs Sullivan is Greek Orthodox.

However, they say they also researched the contraceptive pill and didn't agree with the way it works.

Mrs Sullivan said: "There was never a time where we decided we would have a lot of children. We're happy to have more children, but don't feel we can plan on having more as the

BIGGER BY THE DOZEN:

Michael and Tania Sullivan are getting ready for one more child to go with the 11 the couple already have between them, with an age range of eight months to 19-years-old miscarriages have made us wary, but they've also made us appreciate how precious the gift of life is and how lucky a person is to be able to conceive and carry a child.

"We also researched and didn't agree on the way contraceptives worked or on the reasons for using them. If a couple is in a solid marriage and happy to be parents again, why use a contraceptive and stop it just because it's expected for you?"

"If it [pregnancy] happens, then great. We love having the kids and we are blessed when we do fall pregnant. There's no target – if this was our last one then that's fine."

Mrs Sullivan also spoke out against people who criticise the family for their faith.

She said: "There is nothing wrong with having a faith. It's important for the children to learn about faith. But it's not something we push on them."

The couple live in a five-bedroom house with 10 of their children. Daughter Stephanie lives in Surrey, working as a marketing consultant.

Mrs Sullivan said: "They all get on really well. They squabble, but it works somehow."

The children are all home schooled, but Mrs Sullivan says they still integrate with other children, going to camps and joining clubs.

Mr Sullivan, 39, is a self-employed joiner and the family also get an income from adverts on their blogging website www.largerfamilylife.com.

They say companies approach them regularly to promote their products, but they turn away work because they don't want to "sell out" as their blog is based on "trust".

The couple's latest venture is a partnership with games giant Drummond Games, promoting a range of board games which will go on sale in September. Mrs Sullivan took five of the children to a 'Christmas in July' event this week to promote the games.

Government 'procrastinating' over verdict on Lydd airport expansion

PATIENCE is wearing thin over the Government's slow progress on making a decision on the expansion of Lydd Airport.

Last year's six-month planning inquiry ended with hopes of a decision in spring of this year.

But Lydd residents are still waiting.

Communities secretary Eric Pickles and transport secretary Justine Greening will make the final decision based on the planning inspector's report.

A spokeswoman for the Department for Communities and Local Government said ministers were giving the planning case proper consideration.

"We received the inspector's report in March and will announce a decision as soon as possible," she said.

Chairman of Shepway Labour Party Donald Worsley, writing in newsletter The Hythe Looker,

LONG WAIT: Lydd residents were promised a decision in the spring accused planning officials of "procrastinating".

The planning inquiry ran from February-September, 2011, with evidence from supporters, opposition and industry experts.

Bosses at London Ashford Airport (Lydd Airport), who put forward the proposals, want to extend the runway by 294 metres with a 150m starter extension as well as a new terminal capable of handling up to 500,000 passengers per year.

Plans were approved in 2010 by Shepway District Council, but the Government stepped in and agreed to a public inquiry due to concerns over noise pollution, nuclear safety and the environmental impact on the area.

Facilities-Hire at the Bishop of Rochester Academy

The Bishop of Rochester Academy in Chatham has just announced that due to local demand, key facilities at the Academy will now be made available for hire by the local community and the local business community.

The Academy is currently a dual-site school, with one Campus in Magpie Hall Road and another in nearby Letchworth Avenue. On each Campus there are key facilities which are of interest to the community - two large Assembly Halls, two modern Sports Halls, two modern Dance Studios, a traditional Gym and a number of fully equipped Cookery Rooms and Art Studios.

There are also around 50 Classrooms, which are suitable for teaching a whole range of adult education/community interest subjects, or for businesses to run training courses, plus several small Meeting Rooms which are suitable for local businesses and community groups.

Each Academy site has several Hard-Courts, marked for tennis, netball and five-a-side football.

"We have a large school site, particularly at our Magpie Hall Road Campus, and some very good facilities," said Mr Boxall, the Academy Principal. "It's only right that our facilities are made available to the local community and the local business community when not in use by our own students," he said.

Dance Studios

Modern, with mirror-walls, good natural light and Audio/Visual equipment, the Dance Studios are perfect as a rehearsal space for Dance/Drama Clubs or for Yoga Classes, Dance Classes, etc.

Sports Halls

Modern, marked with basketball, volleyball, badminton and five-a-side football and fully-equipped with good quality nets, etc.

Assembly Halls

With curtained Proscenium-Arch platform Stages and full lighting rigs & all Audio/Visual equipment, the Halls are ideal for a range of drama/operatics/music/dance productions, public meetings, company seminars, family parties or Wedding Receptions, Art Exhibitions or Craft Fayres, or business exhibitions/Trade Fairs, etc. Chairs/tables can be provided, and set out according to usage.

The Academy also has extensive Playing Fields at its Magpie Hall Road Campus and is making two of the fields available. Both are currently marked with pitches for playing football and good quality equipment, such as netted goals, would be provided.

Facilities at both of the Academy Campuses can be made available for hire by the community in the evenings, at weekends and daytime during school holidays - subject to Academy events.

The facilities are being made available for hire at very reasonable rates for local community use. The Academy also has an experienced team of helpful Technicians who can be available for when Audio/Visual equipment is required.

Gym (East Campus)

A 'traditional' Gym, ideal for childrens' parties, youth clubs or as a meeting space for the Brownies, Cubs, Guides, Scouts, Rangers, etc. Also good for Keep Fit or Aerobics Classes, and as a rehearsal space.

Determined to Excel

"We've only just announced that we're making the Academy facilities available to the community and we already have bookings from a Martial Arts Club and a Fitness Class, and we've recently taken enquiries for a Judo Competition, a pre-Wedding Party and from a local Primary School to use one of our fields to run their Football Club training." said Annie Burrell, the Academy's Facilities Hire Co-ordinator.

RELIGION

Bishop fears Christians could be banned from becoming doctors

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

CHRISTIANS are at risk of being silenced in the workplace according to the Bishop of Dover, who fears believers could be prevented from the "caring and educational professions".

The Rt Revd Trevor Willmott said he is concerned people of faith have to "turn off" their religion at the workplace after Margate GP Richard Scott was given an official warning for speaking about his religion in a consultation with a patient.

The bishop said: "I am anxious about expectations in some parts of our society that Christians should seek to compartmentalise their faith."

"It seems we are somehow expected to turn off our faith when we step through the doors of our workplace."

"Will it soon be the case that society actively disqualifies Christians from the caring and educational professions?"

The bishop is the right-hand man of the Archbishop of Canterbury Dr Rowan Williams and carries out his diocese work while the Archbishop deals with national and international Church businesses.

Dr Scott was told he had "crossed the line" when he told a patient at Bethesda Medical Centre in Margate that he may see health benefit from adopting the Christian faith over his own religion.

Dr Scott was given an official warning by the General Medical Council after it was found he told the patient that if he didn't "turn towards

FRAGMENTED SOCIETY: Rt Revd Trevor Willmott

Jesus and hand Jesus his suffering, then (he) would suffer for the rest of his life".

The GP was also said to have claimed the patient's own religion could not offer him any protection and "no other religion in the world could offer what Jesus could offer him".

However, the Bishop of Dover believes there is a place for faith in caring professions and there was a risk that society could become further divided if religion was silenced completely.

He added: "Restricting the expression of Christian faith could foster a society that was even more fragmented – one where the common good was relinquished in favour of individuals' rights."

"Where the fear of upsetting individuals and the fear of disciplinary action in the workplace means Christians will cease to challenge society to change and improve."

These views are challenged by atheist group British Humanist Association though, which insists there is limited space for religion in the workplace.

National Secular Society president Terry Sanderson said: "It's all very well for these bishops and religious people to say there is marginalisation at work and workers, but what is actually happening is co-workers are being protected."

"If you're serving the public, as Dr Scott was using public money to do it, and trying to persuade people to change their religion, that's not acceptable and his professional body said it wasn't acceptable."

"There is room for religion in work, but not at that level."

British Humanism Association's head of public affairs added: "A doctor's personal religious beliefs, however deeply held, are not medical care and clearly should not become part of the service they provide to the community."

"The duty of care that a doctor or other medical practitioners have towards patients does not include proselytising. Individuals should have the right to express their religion, but not in a way which infringes on the rights of others."

Deadline looming on waste consultation

THE deadline is approaching for people to have a say on preferred options for controversial mineral and waste sites in Kent.

The consultation, which closes on Monday, July 23, is the second stage in a three-part process that makes up the minerals and waste site plans, which Kent County Council is required to develop by law.

Of the original 106-site proposals, 25 have been identified as preferred options in the minerals plan, which include sites for aggregate recycling, and 21 as preferred options for waste uses.

These are considered to be the best, most sustainable and deliverable solutions for Kent's minerals and waste needs up to the end of 2030.

Following this, the next stage is consultation on the draft Mineral Sites Plan and Waste Sites Plan, which will eventually be adopted by the council after an examination in public conducted by an independent planning inspector – a process similar to a public inquiry.

Kent Life celebrates 50 years of recording the county's red letter days

By Sarah Sturt

sarah.sturt@archant.co.uk

KENT Life was launched in 1962 with a cover price of two shillings and just 52 pages of almost exclusively black and white photographs and advertisements.

Now part of Archant Life-style, the magazine division of the Archant group, a family-owned business that started more than 160 years ago, Kent Life celebrated its golden anniversary with a party and a June collector's edition, which gave us the chance to look back over the intervening decades and see how much has changed.

For example, while we now regularly feature properties in the million-pound bracket, in the June, 1962, Kent Life you'll find advertised for sale a "superior and charming detached residence" in Sevenoaks, with

■ The August edition of Kent Life is on sale from July 18 and includes a guide to the best beaches in Kent.

There are also different outdoor activities to try, inspired by this summer of sport – from archery at Hever Castle to Nordic walking at Bedgebury Pinetum, and riding the surf at Viking Bay, Broadstairs.

For all the latest news and subscription offers, visit kent.greatbritishlife.co.uk.

seven bedrooms no less – at £13,250.

The last 50 years have seen radical changes to Kent, especially in the transformation of its transport system: the arrival in the 1960s of the M2 and M20 and, 20 years later, the M26 and M25 motorways (Freedom from the juggernaut! trumpeted Kent Life in 1980).

Kent Life also reported on the completion of the Channel Tunnel in 1994, High Speed 1, and Ebbsfleet International in 2007, the staggered opening of the Dartford Crossing (the west tunnel in 1963, the east in 1980, and the bridge in 1991). It's hard to imagine our lives today without any of these vital communication links.

The magazine continues to reflect a changing, growing and vibrant county – from the arrival in 1999 of new retail giant Bluewater, carved out of a chalk quarry, to the opening of the Turner Contemporary gallery in April, 2011, and its subsequent impact on Margate's exciting revival as Kent's new cultural heart.

And a lifesaving £11 million in 1984 enabled Chatham Dockyards to re-launch as a tourist centre, transforming the whole area.

THEN AND NOW: Kent Life has certainly come on a long way since it was first published back in 1962

But some things remain constant and Kent Life retains its strong community feel, with an emphasis on 'faces and places'.

We put three towns each month 'in the spotlight' and always make sure we talk to the people who live and work in the area to get their insider viewpoint.

One of our most popular sections has always been our Social pages, and we love showcasing red letter county occasions. Our Kent Character feature enable us to introduce readers to everyone from High Sheriffs, church leaders and dignitaries to Kent actors, dancers, TV stars, authors and athletes.

Food and drink plays an increasingly important part in the magazine, especially with the increasing interest in local produce, grow-your-own and farmers' markets.

As such a strong farming county, the countryside will always be important to your leading county magazine.

Our ethos is celebratory and there is much to celebrate in this great county of ours.

It's been an extraordinary half century in the county and Kent Life has faithfully reflected its highs and lows in words and pictures, and will continue to do so.

Here's to the next 50 years!

Solar Air UK doesn't only sell and install for their customers, it also installs for a large number of other companies across the UK. It is the eighth biggest installer in the country, with more than 5,000 installations completed to date. The company can also coat already-fitted panels. For further details, visit www.solarairuk.com or phone 0800 917 6859.

Further to its success in the PV industry, Solar Air UK has now also opened a training centre in Hersden, near Canterbury. Courses including wiring regulations, inspection and testing, solar PV, solar thermal and heat pumps are available, as well as domestic energy assessment (EPC) and the forthcoming Green Deal Advisor qualification. COUNTRYSIDE

We need water and web on tap says new rural champion

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WATER and broadband – that's what rural businesses need in large quantities, and are the main priorities of the new champion of the countryside.

Nick Sandford has become the new chairman of the Kent branch of the Country Land and Business Association.

The resident agent for the Godinton Estate, Ashford, said he is determined to see decent internet connections installed for rural businesses.

And he is also concerned about the recent water shortages affecting agriculture.

Mr Sandford said: "The CLA represents the interests of farmers and landowners. Our priorities are to ensure the rural sector is well represented which is even more important today, with the economy the way it is.

"Kent has an active rural sector leading the field in horticulture, and soft fruit production."

The most pressing worry for

RURAL ISSUES: Nick Sandford

rural businesses is water supply.

Mr Sandford said: "There are always various pressures, and the huge challenge in the next few years is water supply.

"The production of top quality green vegetables and other agricultural products does need to have a good water supply.

"We need to ensure agriculture and horticulture has a good and reliable and sustainable water supply because otherwise food production can be hit. This is more important than people hosing down their cars on a Sunday morning."

At the other end of the technology spectrum, he said a good internet connection is vital to rural businesses.

The chartered surveyor, who has worked for the National Trust for a decade, said: "About 40 per cent of Kent's businesses are rural based, and they all need broadband these days. Anyone producing fruit or other foods for the big supermarkets need a connection so they can react quickly to new orders."

He will also be advocating local rural services, protecting property rights, and encouraging rural diversification to create local jobs in the rural economy.

And CLA South East acting regional director Tim Brock, added: "The CLA represents 830 landowner and business members in Kent.

"With Nick's breadth of experience, I am confident that he will be a worthy and committed chairman."

CHARITY

Poppy collection could end as veteran organiser retires

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN URGENT call has gone out for an organiser to run this year's poppy appeal in south Tunbridge Wells.

For the past 15 years, Margaret Brown has organised the annual appeal, but she has now retired and a replacement is desperately needed.

Before becoming an organiser, Mrs Brown was a collector for almost 50 years. Last year she helped the organisation raise more than £12,000.

The Royal British Legion said: "It will be a shame for all of Margaret's hard work to go to waste, but without a new volunteer to take on the role there can be no poppies in south Tunbridge Wells this year."

There has been a previous appeal for an organiser, but no-one came forward and time is getting short for someone to take over this year's appeal in the run-up to Remembrance Sunday on November 11.

Malcolm Blythman, poppy organiser for Tunbridge Wells, said: "We would be happy to advise and support anyone who took on the role as we have many years experience here in the branch."

"You don't have any military connection to be a poppy organiser, you just need to be organised, enjoy working with others and have a desire to help our Service family.

"The role includes ordering supplies, delivering tins and poppies, counting and banking money and organising a rota of volunteers to man supermarket collections through the two weeks of the Poppy Appeal. This is a challenging role, but it is very rewarding."

And Clare Saunders, community fundraiser for west Kent, added: "With public support, the Legion can continue its crucial work helping our Armed Force family."

"Last year 160,000 people were helped nationally from all conflicts since World War One. We have made a £50 million funding commitment to pay for the Royal British Legion Battle Back Centre."

"This will be a national centre of excellence for activity based rehabilitation to help wounded, injured and sick Armed Forces personnel regain their fitness and return to duty, or reskill and make a successful transition to civilian life."

"Standing shoulder to shoulder with all who Serve", the Legion's strapline, describes perfectly what our volunteers do when they take on the role of poppy organiser."

■ Anyone who wants to volunteer to step in to Margaret Brown's shoes can telephone Clare Saunders on 01622 722292 or email csaunders@britishlegion.org.uk.

Festival lets us overindulge in legendary stars

Chris Britcher reflects on three days of entertainment and more ageing rockers than you can shake a walking stick at

THE Hop Farm Festival faced the risk of being a victim of its own success this year.

Twelve months ago, it fired a cannon of intent which hit the critics and audience right between the eyes with such clout it elevated the festival's reputation sky high.

Morrissey and Prince delivered sets so splendid that cheers were almost drowned out by the thunking of awe-struck fans' jaws on the ground.

By the time you'd blended in the likes of Eagles, Brandon Flowers, Iggy Pop and Patti Smith, and the weekend felt like it had a well-crafted air about it, uniting the influential and the pioneering with running orders that reached a real peak by the time the final encore had been belted out.

All of which led to high anticipation for the 2012 Hop Farm Festival. Until, that is, the line-up was announced. Those noisy jaws were replaced with shoulders slumping, if only because some of the big names were so familiar to the event.

Ray Davies had been here before, ditto Patti Smith and, jumbo ditto, Bob Dylan. And where last year Prince reigned on the Sunday night closing slot, this year it was Suede. Things just weren't the same.

Yet by the time Brett Anderson had stomped off the stage, the Hop Farm had proved that while it was unable to hit the mountainous highs of last year, it could still reach base camp.

There were, of course, some stand out performances. Primal Scream provided a Dylan alternative which was hailed a triumph, while Kool & The Gang surprised many.

And just when it needed a real kick up the backside, Richard Ashcroft emerged and single-handedly changed everything. The Sunday had been interspersed by downpours to scatter the audience, but by early evening the former Verve frontman took to the stage and suddenly the Sun came out, staying for the rest of the day.

A greatest hits selection drawn from the vaults of the Verve and his solo material, delivered with a voice bristling with power, clarity, intensity and conviction, made the set impossible to dislike – for many he took the festival crown.

Perhaps, just perhaps, he would have made for a better headliner than Suede. But that would be harsh on Brett Anderson and crew, who ripped through a greatest hits that halted many a festival-goer in their dash for the car park.

Peter Gabriel had headlined the first day, following in the tracks of funk lord George Clinton and Kinks' frontman Ray Davies, packing in the classics.

Gabriel's dazzling display of lights and videos provided a treat for the eyes, with the power of a full orchestra making it something of a spectacular show. His performance, however, was perhaps best summed up by one viewer who gabsord of classic, faithfully reproduced, hits. No. You come to tick one of the industry's greats off your 'must see' list.

Whether that is sufficient for a festival to hang its hat on, however, remains to be seen.

The Hop Farm Festival is a great event. It is well-run, nicely located, and provides some real star power. But, it needs to guard against being a little too self-indulgent.

Peter Gabriel, Suede and Bob Dylan are uncomfortable bed fellows, and while such a blend is often its strength, it can create a line-up which has the hint of the artists' names being drawn at random as to where and when they'll perform.

However sophisticated the palate of the audience, 99 per cent of a festival crowd want nothing other than to be entertained – to have a few beers, let their hair down and dance to songs they're familiar with, or at least be manipulated by such a master of stage craft you end up under their spell.

Star power, established some 30 years ago, is worthy of note, certainly. But a festival needs to create a buzz; to give the audience the impression they are at something special.

The Hop Farm Festival achieves that rarest of things in the over-crowded festival market and that is of a point of difference; providing legendary names to an audience who appreciate real music. The event is exploiting that niche well but it should not cover its ears to concerns over the fact many of the big names had been there so recently. If Van Morrison and Paul Weller are included next year I fear a backlash.

For now, though, let us rejoice in a weekend which managed – for the most part – to avoid the rain that has dogged many events this summer; to rejoice in the big names but, perhaps most of all, rejoice in the fact this great festival is right on our doorsteps.

SEAWORTHY: One of the Navy's nuclear submarines undergoes refitting work at Chatham dockyard

Navigating the rise and fall of our navy's key shipbuilding yard

By Chris Murphy
editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FOR centuries Chatham dockyard was the powerhouse behind Britain's naval domination before it finally became too small to build a new breed of supersized warships.

Finally, after building Nelson's flagship the Victory and a host of other warships to defend our shores, work at the yard started to slump, with Margaret Thatcher signing its death sentence in 1984.

A new book details those halcyon days when Chatham was a mast above other shipbuilders in the UK.

Author, and former Medway resident, Philip MacDougal has penned several books on the area, but this is the one closest to his heart.

Called Chatham Dockyard: The Rise and Fall of a Military Industrial Complex, it was published this week by History Press, and it could help the yard's bid to become a World Heritage Site.

Mr MacDougal said: "This book is important because Chatham is often under-valued.

"For a long period of time, it was the largest and most important naval dockyard in the country. That means it was underpinning British naval sea power that went on to dominate the entire world.

"Of the ships at Trafalgar the biggest single number were built in the Chatham area. Three were built at the dockyard and a fourth on the Med-

THE END: Africa was the Navy's last battleship to be built at Chatham dockyard, and it was launched to sea on May 20, 1905 way, opposite the dockyard.

"It was the powerhouse of the British navy. The key is Chatham was a shipbuilding yard and not like Portsmouth, which was just a base."

Mr MacDougal called his new book the 'rise and fall' because the base had periods of ups and downs as it battled for work from private yards.

He said: "It had a second period of major importance during the mid-19th century when it was the first government dockyard to build an ironclad warship, the Achilles.

"As a result, it basically went on to pioneer developments in steam and iron ship building. This was significant because it saved the dockyard, well, until Mrs Thatcher closed it down."

The book contains more than 60 photos, maps and drawings.

Mr MacDougal said: "Things started to go awry when the dreadnaughts and super dreadnaughts came along in 1905 and 1906, they were too large for Chatham. They were launched in Portsmouth and were super-sized battleships.

"At that point, Chatham lost its prestige of building the new battleships. Every new battleship in the 19th century, the first in the class, was always built in Chatham because it was the lead yard. A new specialism then came along – submarines – and Chatham rose again. But sadly, decline started in the early 20th century."

He said after the closure, the Historic Dockyard Chatham was launched to recall the days of old, and the rest became a new shopping, entertainment and residential centre.

Mr MacDougal continued: "I lived in Medway for a good 25 years, but have also lived in areas with other dockyards, so I have a very good idea how Chatham ranked with others around Britain. As a historian, I took a great interest in how the yards came about and the life inside them."

OPINION

We will ground estuary airport

Campaigner Jamie Weir explains the unique background to the fight against a Thames Estuary airport and why the idea should not go ahead

DESPITE it being nowhere near Christmas, the beginning of July should bring CPRE Protect Kent something we have been waiting months for.

The Government is intending to launch its consultation into the future of aviation in the UK, which is particularly relevant to Kent in light of the recent proposals for a Thames Estuary airport.

We've been looking forward to this consultation as it means that finally, you, the people of Kent, will get to have a say on these plans, which we believe will be incredibly damaging to the environment and quality of life for people in north Kent.

The campaign against the airport proposals is unlike almost any we have ever run before. We are regularly fighting the same side as other environmental groups, but it is extremely rare that we are united with as many local authorities and MPs as we are now. Everybody, except a few politicians in London, seems to accept that these proposals for a new Thames Estuary airport are ludicrous and would have a disastrous impact on local people, communities and biodiversity.

Whilst there is absolutely no doubt that should these proposals go ahead they would cause irreparable damage to the landscape and wildlife of the area, what of the impact on you, the people of Kent?

CPRE Protect Kent believes these plans would have an incredibly detrimental effect on the quality of life for people in Kent and Medway. The new airport would be likely to operate 24 hours a day, leading to a massive increase in noise and air pollution, while the huge scale of it would result in a sprawling infrastructure.

There would need to be housing and industrial units constructed to replace those displaced from Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted, and alongside these the associated services; and all this in a county which is known to be already severely water stressed.

When politicians think about the UK's strategic aviation capacity, they seem to miss the point that it is a national issue, and instead focus almost exclusively on air travel to and from the South East of the country. This is utterly inappropriate, especially in an age of high-speed rail links.

So, is there really a need for this new Thames Estuary airport? If you listen to Boris, you'll almost certainly believe that without one, Britain is about to be consigned to the dustbin of history as other countries take all of our business; and all because Heathrow is running low on capacity. But isn't Heathrow only one of three other airports surrounding London? Those airports still have plenty of spare capacity,

We feel the proposed area is about the worst anyone could choose so why should we take all this potential away from them? Surely that would severely affect their financial viability?

Equally, is there really a case that air travel will increase as predicted? In an age of growing pressure to reduce carbon footprints, businesses are turning to solutions like video conferencing to ensure that unless it is absolutely necessary, executives aren't flying anywhere.

CPRE Protect Kent does not believe there is a need for a new airport in the Thames Estuary, or indeed in the South East. But even if there was, we feel the proposed area is about the worst anyone could choose.

We have fought Thames Estuary airport plans before at Cliffe, and we look forward to watching these dangerous ideas get rejected, too.

KOS COMMENT

Rail passengers are finally getting heard

IT SEEMS a week can't pass without some sort of problem with trains, whether it's price hikes or delays.

Given the chance to make a stand, thousands have claimed compensation under the Delay Repay scheme when they're left waiting on platforms.

Campaigners said it's likely there are even more disgruntled passengers but they are so put off by paperwork and small compensation they haven't bothered to claim.

But despite that, it shows people are having a say and making a point that they won't stand for an inefficient service.

Combine this with the franchise consultation and it feels like the commuter is at last being given a voice.

Gills fans will be praying chairman Paul Scally has finally found the man to win promotion and drag the club out of League Two. Let's all get behind him and give him a chance.

Lib Dems must turn on party

Gary Fuller of Shepway Liberal Democrats seems a confused man in his letter (July 1).

He slams David Cameron's speech on benefits while Lib Dem ministers have backed the law that could cut disabled benefits. And while Gary condemns Cameron on housing benefits, Lib Dem ministers have backed the housing benefit cap that will force many Londoners out of their homes and so to Kent – increasing housing pressures in Gary's own area.

No doubt, he will argue that compromises have to be made in a Coalition Government and things would be different if there was a straightforward Lib Dem Government. But many of us wonder why the Lib Dems never compromise on issues close to their heart – such as arcane forms of proportional representation – while bread and butter issues such as housing, rising prices and student fees are treated as if they are nothing.

Gary – you sound genuine. If you really want to turn against Cameron then it's time to turn against your own party.

Answer to all our problems

Ask Boris to raise the Thames barrier and close the sluices, put floats on aircraft and we could have water, an airport, and be rid of the Great Wen all in one go.

Sheep exports make no sense

According to Farmers Weekly, the UK exported 102,000 tonnes of sheepmeat in 2011, including 72,491 live sheep.

It is bad enough that these animals were forced to endure being crammed into trucks for the trip, but what is all the more shocking is that exactly the same amount of sheepmeat, 102,000 tonnes, was imported that same year.

Why are we forcing British sheep to endure live export when we are bringing the same amount back?

Traffic trials must stop now

Since the Westgate Traffic trial began, residents have told us their views and experiences.

The majority are concerned, as was shown at the Joint Transportation Board meeting on June 19. The removal of pedestrian crossings remains the major worry. Residents have told us they want the crossings, not 'desire lines'.

Residents from Station Road West to Queens Avenue face peak-time congestion and an increase in exhaust fumes – and displacement from the scheme on nearby roads, too.

A number of businesses are feeling the pinch. One tells us takings have fallen by 30 per cent since the trial began, with similar falls also reported.

There have been positives – closure of Pound Lane, 20mph zones and HGV restrictions. These must be retained.

But can the city really endure another eight months of this trial? Especially as so many have written in, spoken at meetings, or signed the 4,000 strong petition. Cutting pollution is important, as is our history. But so are people – and when we hear worries about roads without crossings, or when they say they would not have moved here if they had known about this scheme, surely something is wrong?

Any solution for Canterbury's traffic problems has to be looked at across the wider city. The time has come to halt the scheme and go back to the drawing board for a solution that works. This time with prior consultation. Let's ask residents what they want for the area first, rather than introducing a scheme and asking for views later.

Stand against corrupt banks

Kent Green Party notes that Barclays, HSBC, Lloyds and RBS banks have been caught engaging in rate fixing which provided them with illegitimate gains from some of their customers. Other banks may yet be shown to have engaged in the same type of activity.

No-one has to use a bank which has engaged in unacceptable activities. We all have the right to change our bank. We also need to consider how the bank or building society will use our money.

Some have strong ethical investment credentials like the Co-op and Triodos. Building societies which are still mutual are engaged in helping people get mortgages, so having direct benefits to people living in Kent and Medway. Similarly, banks with strong ethical investment records support fair trade, renewable energy and other things of real use.

If the Coalition will not clean up our banking system then we, the citizens, can. There is an e-petition calling on government to withdraw Barclays' banking licence. Sign here: <http://epetitions.direct.gov.uk/petitions/35446>.

Majority back gay marriage

In reply to Messrs Granger and Clarke's letters on gay marriage, may I first point out that most surveys show majorities in favour or not bothered by it. Anyway to respond:

1) The definition of marriage has largely only been codified by the three Middle East religions, whereas elsewhere many other cultures have fully accepted gay people.

2) Gay people may have civil partnerships, but since these are as valid as marriage, why not legally call it that?

3) If a 'straight' couple only wanted a civil partnership that could be allowed by upgrading the common law rulings.

4) No marriage or civil partnerships have ever been proposed for siblings as in the case of the two sisters.

5) LGBT is a term for the gay community, not an "organisation"; the T stands for Trans and covers both transgendered and transvestite persons.

6) Bisexuals will have sex with either gender, but largely prefer a long-term relationship with one or the other.

7) On positive discrimination, does Mr Clarke really think former Kent Police Chief Constable Mike Fuller, won his appointment because of his colour? Under-representation of minorities may be a problem but giving someone a job they cannot do because of it is a disservice to all.

8) The last census only had a voluntary question about sexuality. Not everyone filled it in, so it's a false representation. Numbers are irrelevant though since it's about justice and equality.

Show celebrates the best of the county with outdoor extravaganza

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

AN outstanding showcase for the best of Kent's business is offered by the County Show, which takes place from Friday to Sunday (July 13-15).

Organised by the Kent County Agricultural Society, it attracts more than 80,000 visitors keen to enjoy one of the UK's best countryside, farming and produce events.

The range of animals is a major draw and its equine and livestock judging attracts people from far and wide.

But it is far more than just a celebration of the diversity and excellence of rural industry, according to George Jessel, chairman of the society.

"The event brings together the best chance to showcase all that Kent has to offer," he said. "And that includes every sector of our industry."

"County shows started as a way for farmers to exhibit their livestock and produce but have moved beyond that."

"Almost every sector is represented, whether you are a florist, make ice cream or run a garage, there are excellent opportunities to showcase your product or services."

"It is also fantastic for networking. If you are a farmer, as I am, you can see the very latest developments in technology as well as find people who work in a particular specialist industry."

"Then there is the event's value to young people. It shows that there are jobs and opportunities available in rural businesses. It's part of education – showing what the countryside can offer."

The show is staged at the Kent Showground, Detling, Maidstone, and runs from 8am to 6pm.

This year will feature special guests, including Caroline Spelman, Secretary of State for the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who will be visiting on the Friday.

TV presenter Adam Henson will be making an appearance on the Saturday, to present prizes to winners of the Grown In Kent initiative, which encourages schoolchildren to grow fruit and vegetables while John Craven will visit on the Sunday.

The Food Tent and Produced In Kent

marquees will offer quality and variety with cakes and breads, tasty cheeses and succulent meats, fresh seafood and homemade pies, jams and chutneys, chocolates and fudge, sausages and Kent-produced crisps and ice cream.

Drink will be equally varied with fruit juices, beers, ciders, ginger beers, teas, coffees, and flavoured vodkas among the tempting treats.

An accompanying wine tent will display a selection of the finest examples from British vineyards, including Kent.

The Flower Tent is a major feature. It is renowned for the horticultural exhibitors who demonstrate their growing and nurturing skills, with displays of roses, fuchsias, succulent cacti, carnivorous plants, shrubs, ferns, and more.

The agricultural area is home to Why

Farming Matters In Kent, which offers detailed information about local produce, careers and training in agriculture. Visitors will also be able to see sheep-shearing demonstrations.

Kent Young Farmers boasts a network of enthusiastic members, all with a shared interest in the countryside and the rural way of life. They will be displaying their skills in the agricultural area, showing a variety of livestock.

The show's EcoVillage promotes and explains how to live a greener life, covering everything from renewable energy and cars to skin care and garden furniture. It will also include cooking demonstrations with organic food.

A woodland area offers a tranquil setting where visitors can learn about rural crafts and skills, kept alive by experts keen to share their knowledge, while a visit to the Kent Beekeepers' tent offers an insight into one of the animal kingdom's busiest creatures.

The beer and cider festival will showcase up to 50 real ales and 15 ciders from regional breweries and micro-brewers, with displays teaching visitors about the art of brewing and the ingredients used. A special festival ale is planned and there will also be a traditional Bavarian bierkeller, complete with oompah band.

Jessel added: "We are really putting Kent on the map with this show."

TAX

Warning: Don't dodge paying taxes

STEER well clear of risky tax avoidance schemes is the message from Sidcup accountants and corporate finance experts McBrides.

Following the Prime Minister's condemnation of comedian Jimmy Carr and the revelation that more A-D list celebrities have been escaping the full force of HMRC by using tax avoidance schemes, managing partner Nick Paterno, pictured, says: "Don't do it."

While tax avoidance schemes such as those used by Carr and other celebrities are perfectly legal, they have been condemned as morally wrong and a means by which the rich have managed to remain even richer, while the man in the street struggles to pay his taxes.

Paterno said: "Obviously, it's the job of an accountant to represent their client, maximising profits and minimising tax. However, some of the riskier tax avoidance schemes quite clearly exploit loopholes in the law which HMRC is trying to patch up."

The Government allocated HMRC nearly £1billion in 2010 to fight tax avoidance, evasion and fraud over the following four years and it has given high-profile publicity to cases in which culprits have been apprehended. It has made it quite apparent that it will not hesitate to act when taxation rules are being abused.

Carr is said to have invested millions in an offshore loan scheme, which had the effect of reducing his income tax to just 1.5 per cent. HMRC is investigating hundreds of similar schemes as part of its effort to clamp down on those who gain unfair advantage.

Paterno said: "Following the recent publicity about these schemes, the Revenue is likely to take a dim view of anyone trying to take unfair advantage and there is no guarantee that these schemes will ultimately work. Anyone entering into such planning must do so with their eyes wide open and be aware they are exposing themselves to potentially years of dialogue and examination by HMRC, with no guarantee of success."

AWARD

Electrical store recognised for its top notch customer service

THE Sony Centre in The Royal Victoria Place Shopping Centre, Tunbridge Wells, has received The Best Customer Service Award in Electrical Retailing during a ceremony at the Forest of Arden Hotel, near Birmingham.

The annual awards are open to every Independent Electrical Retailer in the UK and organised by Independent Electrical Retail magazine and DataStream publishing.

Peter Bowden, the owner of Tunbridge Wells Sony Centre was naturally delighted with this recognition from his peers.

He said, "I am one small part of almost 2,000 Independent Electrical Retailers in the UK and to be recognised by my colleagues with this award is an outstanding honour.

"It couldn't have happened without my staff, so I thank them for their efforts."

"More importantly, I would like to thank our customers who shop with us and send in many letters of praise for the work we do and the service we provide. It is them who make this job worthwhile."

Store manager Garry Harris said: "I have worked at the store in Tunbridge Wells for 15 years and this a great award to receive, it shows that all the hard work my staff put in on a daily basis is both recognised and rewarded by our colleagues in retail but more importantly by our customers. We will continue to give the best service we can."

Credit where credit's due

WE all have credit records and some of us have a more chequered past than others.

Today, details of our credit history are omnipresent and can be all-too easily sourced by those considering lending to us. It is all based on risk and reward – if you lend Mr Average a fiver, you have a 75 per cent chance of getting it back.

The wealthy, meanwhile, don't have to worry. Not because they can easily maintain a good credit rating, but because they don't need credit in the first place. While those who desperately need to borrow money, find it problematic. Need, unfortunately, is not what determines the allocation of credit.

If we have the capacity and inclination to keep credit records on all our citizens, then I believe there should be another kind of record – a "contribution record".

Here, the scores of those who have made contributions to society by way of sacrifice of their time for charity or in gainful employment would be recorded, as a testament to their social pay-back – a way of restoring a bit of the collective balance in favour of the selfless. Not in order to judge those who don't make such a contribution, but to reward those who do.

Something of this notion was expressed by Frank Field, the Labour MP for Birkenhead. He feels: "benefits have to be earned rather than automatically allocated on need."

Surely it would be fairer to allocate housing to those who have made a contribution to our own society over many years?

A personal view from Denis Minns, managing director of Sevenoaks-based DBS Homes, who wants to give "credit where it is due" – by ensuring those who make a contribution to society get something back for their generosity and selflessness

And that surely is our principal concern: housing allocation. Housing authorities may have a points system for housing allocation, but these are based on need. Why not have a system that consults the contribution record?

In the most part, land on which affordable housing is built, is paid for by the development of market housing.

Provision is made on new homes developments for affordable housing to be built on behalf of housing associations, or a payment is made towards affordable housing elsewhere. Building costs, meanwhile, are met by grants from the Homes and Communities Agency and Local Authorities.

Developers undertake the construction of affordable housing to rigorous building codes and timescales.

These homes, provided by our housing associations, offer economical, energy efficient and low-maintenance buildings for their occupiers. They are the best housing available and make a positive contribution to the reinvigoration of our communities.

Let us then instead, provide these homes to those in society who make the most positive contribution too.

We have too little subsidised housing to go round – let it be allocated to those who have earned it.

Award demonstrates excellent contribution

STAFF at an Aylesford transport firm are celebrating after being presented with a prestigious national award.

Prospect Commercials, based on the trading estate in St Michael's Close, was presented with the Commercial Contribution Award in the annual ceremony organised by the Fortec Distribution Network.

The award followed a vote among Fortec's 65-strong network of licensees across the UK.

It was in recognition of the company's dedication to Fortec and its work ethos – going the extra mile for the benefit of Fortec and customers.

Danny Latham is a partner at Prospect Commercials alongside John Bailey.

He said: "We are absolutely delighted to win this award. It means so much to us and is testament to the hard work that goes on in the company day in, day out."

"It also signifies the strength of our relationship with Fortec. Joining the Network was a fantastic move for our company. Since day one we have enjoyed continuous growth – not just on the Fortec side but also on the haulage side, but Fortec has been key to that growth."

At the time of joining Fortec, as 2006 drew to a close, Prospect Commercials employed a workforce of 25 and operated a fleet of 25, working out of a 12,000 sq ft warehouse.

Two years ago the company outgrew its premises and moved into its existing 20,000 sq ft warehouse. Due to continued growth, Prospect Commercials is due to move again into a nearby, 25,000 sq ft premises on the same trading estate.

It now employs a workforce of 80, with half a dozen more part-time staff, operating a 70-strong fleet.

Second chance for post warehouse

A KINGS Hill resident and businessman has come to the rescue of customers of the recently closed independent post and packing service on the development by buying the company and relaunching the service.

Hugh Furness, whose barcoding and IT business – the third largest in the world – is based in East Peckham, was a regular user of Post 'n' Packing Warehouse, and, when it closed at the beginning of May, was keen to find a way of restoring the service.

"I have lived at Kings Hill for ten years and am very involved with the community so I knew how the closure of the service was affecting people," said Furness.

"I approached the developer to see if I could take over the lease on the premises and they were so incredibly helpful and supportive that the deal was done and the business up and running within two weeks."

He has taken over the business with Martyn Filby, a colleague at the East Peckham business and re-employed three of the former Post 'n' Packing Warehouse staff, including office manager Mike Oliver.

Now called Post and Packing UK, the company offers personal and business postal and courier services, including DX document exchange for lawyers, mailboxes, document storage and archiving.

As well as Kings Hill, the catchment area includes

FRESH START: The team at the recently rescued Post and Packing UK have already gathered lots of support

Maidstone, Snodland, East Peckham and Rochester and there are plans to buy some tuk tuks for collections and deliveries in Kings Hill.

Worldwide express delivery and logistics company DHL has already approached the new company about becoming one of its hubs and, said Furness, adding that the reaction to the new business is 'overwhelming'.

"People have been very supportive and we have received lots of cards from well-wishers," he said. "I know we have made the right decision."

Andrew Blevins, managing director of Kings Hill developer Liberty Property Trust UK Ltd

said that he was delighted someone had taken over the business and is continuing with the service.

"We were very keen to support Hugh and Martyn in their efforts to preserve a service that people living and working in the Kings Hill community were telling us was valued," he said.

MP congratulates students on Open University passes

OPEN University sixth form students have been presented with certificates by Maidstone and the Weald MP, Helen Grant.

After the presentation ceremony for 29 students she toured the newly completed sixth form study and teaching facilities at Maidstone Grammar School for Girls.

The Year 12 and 13 students have been studying OU modules this academic year on a variety of topics including medicine, molecules and drugs, Shakespeare, writing fiction, and nuclear energy.

Ms Grant said: "I am hugely proud of the Maidstone Grammar School for Girls sixth form students, they are a real credit to the school. The Open University modules provide a firm foundation for future studies and clearly illustrate that hard work, dedication and commitment, will reap rewards. I heartily congratulate both staff and students in their achievements."

Maidstone Grammar School for Girls is the largest provider of OU modules to sixth form students in the south of England, with many students having started the course when they were 16.

Working in conjunction with their normal A-level studies, studying for an OU module illustrates the students' capacity for hard work and a commitment to study, making them excellent future candidates for university.

Headteacher Mary Smith said: "The students have been fantastically successful and we are very proud of them. These are hard-working students who now have a qualification to demonstrate their ability to work at depth on a topic they are passionate about."

Lucy Jeffrey, who studied a module on Shakespeare said: "It was challenging but definitely rewarding. Helen Grant was genuinely interested in what we had been studying and it was a lovely opportunity to talk to her."

All change as school leaving age set to rise

CHANGES to the age that young people leave education are due to come into place from next year and officials at Bexley Council want to make sure that parents and carers, education professionals, employers and young people in the borough are aware of what this means to them.

Under new Government regulations, from September, 2013, anyone aged 16 (current Year 10) will have to continue in education, training, or employment with training, until at least the end of the academic year when they will turn 17.

And from September, 2015, those aged 16 (current Year 9) will have to participate until at least their 18th birthday.

To find out the best way to communicate the changes the council would like anyone who will be affected to take part in its online survey at www.bexley.gov.uk/rpa.

Cabinet member for education, Cllr John Fuller said: "These are momentous changes to our education system.

"We want to make sure that before the changes come in we communicate them to the right people in the most appropriate way. Please visit the survey and give us your ideas on the best way to get our message across."

Covenant to help troops get education and work when they join Civvy St

A SPECIAL contract to help protect and support former military personnel in Tonbridge has been signed.

Royal British Legion Industries and Tonbridge and Malling Borough Council signed what is called a Community Covenant which ensures they work together to help ex-forces staff get access to training and employment.

It reflects the principles of the Armed Forces Covenant published last year.

It recognises the moral obligation the nation has to the Armed Forces and their families and the sacrifices individuals make in serving their country.

The agreement seeks to prevent disadvantages they can face in comparison to others, and acknowledges in some cases they require special consideration, particularly those who are sick, injured or bereaved. It also covers issues such as housing, education and support services.

Council leader Nicolas Heslop and RBLI chief executive Steve Sherry signed the agreement at Royal British Legion Village, Mr Sherry, a former brigadier, understands all too well the challenges many can face when settling back into civilian life and communities.

He said: "Making the transition back into civilian employment for many of our Armed Forces, especially those who may have been injured in combat, can be a daunting process.

"RBLI offers an integrated approach to the provision of services for Armed Forces personnel with access to services which will help rehabilitation, training, employment prospects and long term independence.

"We are proud to sign a Covenant Agreement with Tonbridge and Malling Borough Council to formalise our commitment to work together for the benefit of those who have served in HM Forces."

And Cllr Heslop added: "The council is a strong supporter of the work carried out by RBLI at Aylesford Village. This covenant commits us to help them further by promoting the good work they undertake in supporting the veteran community and to look for further opportunities to develop new services to help those who have served their country and are returning to civilian life."

At the village, RBLI's Social Enterprise produces pallets, fruit bins, kindling, and road and rail signs.

It employs 300 people providing healthcare, rehabilitation, accommodation, assessment and training for Armed Forces communities.

College scoops large-business award

MIDKENT College is celebrating after seeing off all-comers to be named 'Large Business of the Year' at the Kent Excellence in Business Awards (KEIBA).

The announcement was made at a gala dinner hosted by former Dragons' Den star Rachel Elnaugh and held at Priestfield Stadium, Gillingham.

MidKent College beat other shortlisted finalists TW Services and Mainstream Group to the title of 'Large Business of the Year' after a judging process that rated entrants against pre-set criteria.

Acting principal Sue McLeod dedicated the award to principal Stephen Grix, who is currently on sick leave. She added: "A big thank you must also be paid to our staff for the support they give to students of all ages and backgrounds.

"We all have a passion for what we do, and in particular for creating the entrepreneurs, managers and employees of the future who will make Kent and Medway an even greater place to live and work."

KEIBA aims to recognise and reward excellence in Kent and Medway businesses of all sizes, as well as individuals.

It is rare for a public sector organisation like MidKent College to win such an award, but the judges were particularly impressed by the fact that a third of the college's £53 million annual turnover is self-generated.

This is partly thanks to a 30-year contract with the Ministry of Defence to deliver construction and engineering training at the Royal School of Military Engineering.

Ms McLeod said: "One of our biggest priorities is to support local employers in Kent and Medway by providing training for their staff, offering top quality apprenticeships and giving young people the job skills business leaders are looking for.

"We also recently launched a new suite of higher education courses to ensure we are catering for all levels of expertise."

Technology college showered with praise for improving GCSE results

HARTSDOWN Technology College in Margate is one of the top 10 per cent of schools in the UK by improving its GCSE results year-on-year from 2008-11.

The national recognition for achieving some of the fastest improving GCSE results has come from the Specialist Schools and Academies Trust.

SSAT chief executive Sue Williamson said: "Hartsdown should be congratulated for their stunning achievement in improving their GCSE results.

"The college has proved itself to be one of the best schools in the country – there is plenty other schools could learn from Hartsdown's success.

"These results are testament to the commitment and hard work of the students, teachers and leadership team, and a vindication of their belief in high expectations, good teaching and ambition for every young person."

Hartsdown has seen the GCSE results in five years rise by at least 19 percentage points overall.

Principal Andy Somers said: "This is an outstanding achievement. This fantastic accolade is hard-earned and well-deserved.

"It reflects the sheer hard work, determination, enthusiasm and spirit of our students, staff, families and governors.

"I always refer to our college as a cohesive family unit that works together for our success – and this is a perfect example."

Students have it all sewn up for acrobats' Olympic gold medal trousers

STUDENTS at The Folkestone Academy have been creating costumes that will be worn at the Olympic medal ceremonies.

At a series of workshops, sixth form textiles students have been making trousers for the National Youth Theatre acrobatics performances to take place throughout the competition.

Art and textiles teacher Menna Buss, has been working with the students to develop valuable sewing skills which can be applied to further studies in textiles.

The academy says it has a strong visual arts department in which students benefit from a range of creative opportunities such as the recent event, Folkestone Charivari.

Mrs Buss said: "This costume-making opportunity is an excellent way for academy students to be actively involved in a major international event.

"The National Youth theatre acrobats' trousers may be a small part of a vast event, but the students involved can feel proud to have contributed whilst gaining valuable skills."

One student, Danell Banton, participated in the workshop and found it to be valuable time to Danell, who is no stranger to a sewing machine, said: "I worked for a period of time in Ella's Boutique in Folkestone creating patterns and plan to establish my own wedding dress design company."

The academy students now look forward to seeing their creations on TV when the ceremonies are screened around the world this summer.

Enterprising grammar pupils at the business end of special week

PUPILS at Fort Pitt Grammar School have staged an enterprise week, and received some help from an expert.

Sian Murphy, who is chair of Women in Business Mid Kent handed out certificates and awards to mark the end of the week.

Year 10 students from the school in Chatham have worked with volunteer facilitators from local businesses over the week on enterprise and creativity workshops, developing knowledge and awareness and giving them a feel for a real business start-up.

They also exhibited and sold products at a trade fair on Thursday morning.

Ms Murphy held a marketing workshop with the students early in the week and came back to the school on Friday to present them with their certificates and award the winning team.

The week was run by Medway Education Business Partnership which creates opportunities between education and business for young people that generate a culture of enterprise and innovation.

It specialises in all areas of work-related learning, including work experience placements in industry, plus a range of projects and programmes to support employability skills development for all of Kent and Medway's young people.

THE INTERVIEW

Danny Martin

Celebrating 85 years on track

Nick Ames finds out about the remarkable history of the world's smallest public railway

ROMNEY, Hythe and Dymchurch Railway – the smallest public railway in the world – celebrates its 85th anniversary next weekend.

The official opening took place on July 16, 1927, with the locomotive Hercules hauling the inaugural train from Hythe to New Romney. When first opened to the public the line only covered, in double track, the eight miles between the two small towns.

But owner Captain Jack Howey soon had his eye on extending the line and in 1928 double tracks carried the trains to Dungeness running close to Greatstone – a ride of 13.5 miles.

Current general manager Danny Martin – who used to run operations for British Rail – said next Sunday will see the main commemorations of the anniversary.

"It's the closest date we can get to the running of the first passenger train," he said. "So we shall be re-enacting the event."

The railway operates one-third scale locomotives, both steam and diesel powered – and a fleet of passenger carriages. Trains run at around 25 mph, slowing down to negotiate the numerous level crossings and bridges.

Locomotives are based on classic British and Canadian-Pacific Railroad designs – with the latter being constructed as it was felt the enclosed cabs would give drivers more protection against the rain and wind which occasionally sweeps across the Marsh.

Their names include Dr Syn, the legendary smuggler of the area, and Winston Churchill.

THROUGH HISTORY: Below, Laurel and Hardy re-opened the line in the 1940s. Danny Martin manages the train line we know today

Howey and traffic manager Robert Hardie, inspected Hercules and the inaugural train.

Danny said: "During those early years, the railway became famous and people came to ride on the Smallest Public Railway in the World. The locomotive fleet was extended to nine main-line express engines and a fleet of luxurious coaches were built.

"It suffered damage during the Second World War when the line was requisitioned by the War Department, which even created the only miniature armoured train in the world."

The line was used to take troops along the coast and Hercules was covered in armored plating and had two wagons converted to carry anti aircraft guns – the team were reputed to have shot down at least one enemy aircraft.

It is believed the Luftwaffe pilot spotted the railway from above and was unaware it was a miniature network, diving to attack he misjudged and came too close to the defensive weaponry, so presenting an easy target.

The line was used extensively during the building of PLUTO (Pipe Line Under The Ocean), which fuelled the Allied invasion force after the D Day landings of June 1944.

The post-war years were good, and the publicity the RH&DR gained from being in the front-line paid off.

Danny said: "Laurel and Hardy re-opened the line in 1947, this was the first time it got large scale publicity.

The RH&DR was the culmination of the dreams of two men, Captain Jack (EP) Howey – a racing driver, millionaire land owner, former Army officer and miniature railway fan and Count Louis Zborowski well-known racing driver of his day – famous for owning and racing the Chitty Chitty Bang Bang Mercedes – and a man considerably richer than Howey.

The Count was keen to build a fully working express railway using the 15" gauge, and ordered two Pacific class locomotives, Green Goddess and Northern Chief which are both still in service, to be designed by the leading model engineer of his day, Henry Greenly and built in Colchester by Davey, Paxman and Co.

Before they were delivered however, the Count was killed while racing at Monza in the Italian Grand Prix.

So Howey was left with two locomotives and the task of finding somewhere to run them. He commissioned Greenly to help, and it was he that came up with the idea of building a railway across a remote area of Kent – Romney Marsh.

At the opening ceremony Earl Beauchamp, Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, General Sir Ivor Maxse, chairman of the railway company,

"The 50s and early 60s saw a boom in tourism and the Kent coast and the line benefited greatly with large numbers of visitors coming for holidays."

The arrival of the Hollywood duo created a stir in Kent. They boarded a train at Ashford and then a car took them to Hythe where, despite a drizzle, thousands turned out to welcome them, including the Mayor of Folkestone Alderman H Hughes and the Mayor of Hythe Alderman J A Wiles. The duo were given as a memento a clockwork key which looked like something from a wind-up toy.

An improvised comedy routine saw Laurel and Hardy attempt to board the small carriages before the train set off and lunch was taken at the Jolly Fisherman pub in Greatstone, with tea then held at the Light Railway Restaurant.

But package tourism saw numbers declining in the late 60s while owner Howey died and investment fell away. Bridges were in poor condition, rolling stock was ageing, and locomotives were costly to maintain.

Then a new owning group emerged headed by Sir William MacAlpine in 1973 and repaired the damage. Crumbling bridges were renewed, rolling stock replaced and maintained, two new diesel locos were bought and a long term-time school train contract was signed.

In the past the railway has carried freight, gravel, parcels and post as well as passengers.

Now it sees more than 100,000 visitors a year and has licenses for weddings, gives people the chance to have a go at driving a train and holds special events throughout the year.

"It's always a challenge but very rewarding," said Danny. "My last job – for British Rail and the various companies which came from it – was running the operations of a full sized railway. The issues I face now on a day-to-day basis are different, yet similar the many ways.

"Here the buck stops with me and my team. We are responsible for everything. In my previous job the responsibility was shared, but there was also far more that could go wrong."

This very English pub chimes a happy tone with the family

In its clearly-defined role of traditional English country pub, The Bell has a marked advantage. After all, how many such venues can be based in such a wonderfully-titled village as St Nicholas-at-Wade? The name apparently comes from the time that monks would wade across the River Stour, which separates Thanet from the rest of Kent, and the place still retains a genuine charm not always easily found in these parts.

St Nicholas (we'll leave the wading bit alone now) is, it should be noted, a small village but a small village that happily manages to sustain two pubs in these difficult times for the hospitality industry – two pubs indeed that are slap-bang opposite each other. So we're talking quite a village. And, to be fair, quite a pub.

We visited on a weekday evening for a birthday meal. Not quite what you'd call a big party – two children, two parents, two grandparents – but enough to be getting on with, especially bearing in mind that one of this band numbered a boisterous six-year-old boy.

Now here's a thing. After all the times I've tutted at those on neighbouring tables who seemed unable or unwilling to keep their younger companions under control, I now find myself in the position of attempting the same. And attempt it we must – it is not fair to subject other people out for a pleasant meal to noisy children charging around their tables – but there also has to be an acceptance that it is not the easiest job in the world. In other words, as long as they're making a genuine effort to keep things calm, we should cut families with young children some slack when they're out.

And here The Bell scores highly. There is a strong feeling that this is a real family pub, and with it the understanding that this doesn't have to mean rubbish food for the kids. Yes, it is possible to take children out for a meal and not subject them to chicken nuggets and giant oven chips. They are capable of enjoying much the same food as you, if in slightly smaller amounts.

At which point, I should mention our portions, which were generous and fulfilling. If you like eating, you will like The Bell.

An excellent à la carte menu was enforced by a specials board chalked up on the wall – we mixed and matched between the two, although the chicken pie proved so enticing that it was chosen as main course by three on our table.

For me, though, it was oven-roasted duck breast served with Dauphinoise potatoes, fennel and orange sauce that took the fancy. The fennel (why oh why?) needed removing from the equation – no problem, the cheery waitress told me – and all was right with my world.

Pick of the starters was surely the crispy king prawns in a light crisp batter with sweet chilli, but the consumer of deep-fried Camembert in its own coating argued strongly otherwise. Whatever, we were both happy... as indeed were all, young and old alike.

Hygiene boosts trade at the Frog & Orange

THE owner of a free house near Wingham has found a way to boost trade for just 20 minutes' cleaning a day. Laura Cumberland, who runs the Frog & Orange at Shatterling with husband Trevor, believes it is the extra time that has given the pub a top rating.

The government-backed Food Hygiene Rating Scheme boosted trade at the pub. Laura said "People notice our certificate and it has been really good for trade. People are happy to eat here knowing our health and hygiene procedures have the best possible score."

The team have bagged the top five star rating from the FHRS.

Be prepared if you plan to rent

HOME-OWNERS who choose to rent out their homes, instead of sell them, risk walking into a legal minefield, warns Jonathan Smithers, a partner with Tunbridge Wells-based law firm CooperBurnett.

Mr Smithers, who is chairman of the Conveyancing and Land Law Committee of the Law Society, says that with home-owners struggling to sell in the slow property market, some are renting out their homes instead.

He said that becoming overnight landlords brings with it liability and legal hurdles.

Mr Smithers said: "Opting to rent out, rather than sell, in a quiet market can help generate income, but get it wrong or encounter a disagreement with your tenants and you could pay the price. There is a lot to consider when renting out a property – tenancy agreements, tax matters, deposits, service charges and special insurance that will require specialist legal advice from a CQS firm.

"Of equal concern is the possibility that renting out your home could be a breach of your mortgage conditions, so you will need a CQS accredited solicitor to check what you are permitted to do.

"It might be tempting to take shortcuts when starting out as a landlord, even if only on a temporary basis.

"However, mistakes early in the process could come back to haunt you. Tenants have rights and won't be afraid to use them, so it is vital to make any landlord-tenant arrangements as watertight as possible."

New location? Try before you buy

RENTING in a particular location in order to get a feel for it before committing to buy is one way new home owners can ensure they are making the right decision.

A recent survey has revealed that many first time buyers are making mistakes when looking for a new home as they don't think about the wider picture of the area they are buying in, the quality of the home and community.

One couple who recently settled into life at Crest Nicholson's Ingress Park development in Greenhithe, however, knew they were making the right decision, having rented at the development for 18 months prior to purchasing their first home there.

Ali Broome and her partner Joe Foster rented an apartment in The Pier phase of the development and said they enjoyed its location and community feel so much that, when they heard the last phase of houses to be built on site, Papermill Walk, was to be released for sale they jumped at the chance to buy their first home.

Ms Broome said: "We first came across Ingress Park as Joe had a friend who lived there and when we visited we really liked the location and the views over the river.

"At the time we weren't ready to buy a home of our own but took the opportunity to 'try before you buy' and rented an apartment in The Pier. During our time there we just thought it was an ideal place in which to settle down.

FIRST HOME:

Ali Broome and Joe Foster have bought a home on Papermill Walk

"When we heard about the plans for Papermill Walk we knew we had to snap up the chance and bought ourselves a three-bedroom home."

Ingress Park is set in 72 acres of mature grounds, with a regenerated riverside walk and heritage trail. Another unique feature is the grass amphitheatre, a focus for community events and summer picnics.

Papermill Walk is the latest phase of homes to be released for sale at Ingress Park includes one bedroom apartments and coach houses as well as four-bedroom family homes.

MAKING a successful supermini seems like the biggest ask in the motor industry.

It must be compact yet roomy enough for five; capable of scooting around town in comfort but also motorway cruising; cheap but not Spartan; stylish yet practical; and – for the manufacturer – priced affordably yet profitable.

Rarely are these stars aligned, but they converged for the 1983-vintage Peugeot 205 and launched a dynasty of small cars for the French marque.

It sold five million units worldwide (UK 425,000) and still looks fresh now. Critics were tough on its 1998 follow-up, the 206, but that sold 7.7 million (645,000) – the best-selling Peugeot ever and still produced in some countries.

This was followed by the 207 in 2006, a relative failure selling ‘only’ three million (302,000) globally.

And so to the latest of the line, the 208, which looks to have recaptured the 205’s star struck alignment.

It’s one of those rare cars that looks good from all angles, and in either three or five door format. There are classy details too, such as the chrome dashes on the front foglights and, on the three-door, the trailing edge of the rear side windows. Impressively, style and distinction continues inside with arguably the best interior in the sector for design, materials, space and functionality.

No wonder Peugeot says the 208 design gathered the best ever pre-launch consumer ratings for one of its cars. And this is important in the real world of car sales, because 68 per cent of superminis are bought privately, often because of how they look.

Petrol models also dominate here (74 per cent) and Peugeot has launched a low emission, road tax exempt 68bhp 1.0-litre three-cylinder to try and mop up some of this demand, though there are also 1.2, 1.4 and 1.6-litre petrol and 1.4 and 1.6-litre diesel options.

The new small engine is a brave effort and many buyers will like the price and economy – lack of road tax plus 65.7mpg on the official combined cycle – but it’s raucous and uneven around town, even if it does settle down when cruising. Unfortunately, the point was made too well when I stepped from the 1.0-litre petrol into a 208 1.6litre diesel, which was refined and responsive in all situations.

Whatever the engine though, the cabin is a delight: real quality with smart driver interface work having been done on the steering wheel controls and display screen – more on that when we get a test car.

And the icing on the cake for consumers is that this good looking newcomer could get a GTi model later to compare with the legendary 205GTi, though Peugeot UK insiders say they will take it only if it has the handling and performance to burnish the legend.

Hyundai battles badge bores

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HERE'S a car to confound the badge snobs – Hyundai's second generation i30 hatchback.

Get inside and it's clear the Korean marque has used the VW Golf as the main benchmark – sister brand Kia has done the same with its new Ceed equivalent.

Spend more time with the i30 though and most drivers would be hard-pressed to argue for buying the VW over the two Koreans, especially if you take into account the pricing and generous warranties offered by Hyundai and Kia – five years plus unlimited mileage in the case of the i30, and a powerful persuader in gloomy economic times.

But the VW badge carries snob value and the Hyundai's does not... yet.

However, the gap is closing fast; gurus of the secondhand market tell me cash-strapped used car buyers are cottoning on to Hyundai, causing values to harden of late.

That bullish warranty isn't given out lightly either, so secondhand buyers know they are getting something reliable, maybe with some warranty intact if the previous owner has replaced it after the usual three years' ownership.

But it is also about the soaring level of quality that Hyundai has built into its cars of late; the original i30 arrived in 2007 and that represented a quantum leap over the marque's previous efforts in that sector.

Just five years on and 'son of i30' is another big step, with dashboard fixtures and fittings that would not disgrace a Golf or the others to beat here – the Ford Focus and Vauxhall Astra.

True, the Hyundai still doesn't quite cut it dynamically, so keen drivers may still prefer the VW, Ford or Vauxhall, but the gap is closing fast here and Hyundai has caught up elsewhere.

It certainly has the looks to compete; though I prefer the lines of the closely related Kia Ceed, the i30 has distinction, borrowing heavily on the elegant i40 shape from the class above.

BE A TREND SETTER: It's time to stop following the crowd and realise the benefits of the Hyundai i30

Priced from an accessible £14,500 there is plenty of powertrain choice too – all with a six-speed gearbox standard – and including 1.4-litre petrol and diesel engines.

However, the test car had Hyundai's tried and tested 1.6CRDi diesel (from £16,895), available in 110PS (109bhp) and 128PS (126bhp) outputs, but both equipped with Hyundai's eco-efficient Blue Drive technology including auto stop/start. This challenges the likes of the VW Golf BlueMotion – a rather more expensive proposition from £19,430.

In the case of our 110PS i30 model, Blue Drive translates into an official 76.3mpg on the combined cycle and 97g/km of CO2 emissions, which means exemption from road tax.

There's no apparent downside to this miserly behaviour either, with a 0-62mph figure of 11.2 seconds and decent low down pulling power for smart and safe take offs out of junctions.

Standard i30 kit is generous, including voice-activated Bluetooth connectivity, LED daytime running lights, multi-function steering wheel for audio and other controls and electric/heated door mirrors and our mid-range Active model also gains alloys, cruise control, rear parking sensors and Hyundai's Flex Steer system: Comfort, Normal and Sport.

Comfort mode certainly eases things up when parking, but Sport needs more bite, should you explore the more dynamic chassis on this new generation i30 and, ultimately, only underlines that the car falls short of the ruling Golf/Focus/Astra party in this area.

But there is little else to gripe about: the cabin is bigger all round than the previous car, as is the boot – now one of the biggest in the sector – while the dashboard is impressively well-ordered.

It can't be long before badge snobs realise that it's cooler to be a trend setter in the case of Hyundai.

Powerhouse pick-up is here

PICK-UP trucks don't come any hotter than Vauxhall's new monster from Down Under, the 6.2-litre V8-engine VXR Maloo (from £51,500) echoing the styling of Vauxhall's other Aussie import, the iconic VXR8 saloon.

Developing 427bhp, the Maloo will hit 60mph in 4.9 seconds, helped by a 'launch control' mode enabling the rear wheels to apply the prodigious power on tap.

D-Maximising your finances

ISUZU'S all-new D-Max pick-up has been launched with a range of flexible, low-cost contract-hire packages.

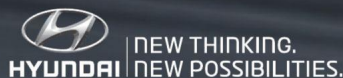

The single cab 4x2 entry model (£13,734 excl taxes) is available for a first instalment of £1,100, followed by £185 monthly over four years, with air con and electric windows as standard. The expected best seller, the Yukon, is available from £233 per month.

Toledo's now back in Britain

SEAT is to revive the Toledo model name for the UK launch of an all-new coupé hatchback early next year.

The previous Toledo was a saloon, axed in 2004, but fondly remembered for its style and reputation as a driver's car. However, it could not break down British prejudice for bootied versions of family hatchback size. Its successor should do better.

Fiat supermini is now Punto - full stop

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

FIAT took a chance in 1993 when it coined the name Punto for its supermini series – it can mean full stop in Italian, and many older generation cars did just that.

The model gained more reliability, space and style though when the Grande Punto arrived in 2006, a necessary modification to the name as the previous and fairly obviously smaller Punto carried on being sold alongside it for a while.

Following the demise of its little brother and a facelift in 2010, the Grande Punto evolved into – surprise, surprise – the Punto Evo.

Now we have a major revision for 2012 and a reversion to Punto plain and simple – surely also signalling a full stop for this current body shell?

But the Punto wears its five or so years well, remaining one of the most stylish yet practical three or five-door supermini designs on the road and also getting radical revisions this time around, not least Fiat's multiple award-winning TwinAir petrol engine.

As the name suggests, this is a lightweight twin-cylinder turbocharged unit, and the perfect riposte to the diesel revolution. It delivers power quickly with a sporty exhaust note when required, but can be driven economically and also has low CO2 emissions (98g/km) qualifying it for road tax exemption.

This has already been a huge hit in the Fiat 500, where its sporty nature has helped win over many male buyers to Fiat's best-selling car.

It will surely do the same for the Punto, especially for those seeking the five-door versatility that the 500 cannot offer.

A 1.2-litre and a pair of efficient 1.4-litre engines – one turbocharged – complete the petrol options. An economical 1.3-litre diesel unit is available with 75 and 85bhp – the latter also being road tax-exempt.

Fiat is openly chasing younger buyers with a new range of colours and alloy wheels and the adoption of several trim levels that have been successful for the 500: Pop, Easy, Lounge and the new GBT and TwinAir.

Opening the range at £9,900 – below the psychologically important ten grand mark – the entry level Pop version highlights the Punto's value proposition; kit includes trendy denim seat inserts, daytime running lights, steering wheel adjustable for reach and rake, height-adjustable driver's seat and remote central locking.

But the next level, Easy (from £10,900) is expected to be the best seller, with its body-coloured door handles and mirrors, remote control door locking, a rear bench that splits 60/40, heated mirrors and air-con.

TwinAir (from £12,100) is pitched as the sporty and blokes' choice, being based on the Easy, but also getting 15-inch multi-spoke alloys, glossy black mirror covers and door pillars, unique seats, and privacy glass.

She gasped at such value. "An efficient city car with 3 years' 0% APR representative low rate finance,

3 years' Nissan Roadside Assistance and advanced features as standard..."

FOOTBALL

Gills legend Cochrane still holds club close to heart three decades on

By Greg Miles

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

THERE can't be many men who can claim to have taught the Saudi Arabian army how to play football, as well as scoring against England at Wembley.

In fact there is just one – Terry Cochrane.

It's nearly 30 years since the Northern Irish winger mesmerised fullbacks, and gave fans a lifetime of memories in a three year spell – including a goal from the halfway line which would make David Beckham's effort look average.

After arriving from Middlesbrough on a free transfer in 1983 he went on to make 131 appearances scoring 21 goals in Keith Peacock's side, which included the likes of Tony Cascarino, Steve Bruce, and Dave Mehmet.

And while fans have never forgotten those times, neither has Cochrane who still holds the club close to his heart.

"I think maybe in hindsight I should have stayed another season but when you've played and you've peaked at a good time you could fade away in another year, I wanted to leave on a high note," he said.

"It's nice to still be talked about when Gillingham comes up."

He was a crowd pleaser of the highest order, not just for his ability, but his on-field antics, including blowing his nose on corner flags, which kept fans entertained in a way he feels is lacking from the modern game.

"I used to keep them amused, it's part of the way I played, it was just off the cuff and the people seemed to like it," he said.

"I think I proved at Gillingham there was time to have fun and time to play and I found a good mixture."

His exploits weren't anything new as any avid viewer of the 1981/82 season Match of the Day will have noted.

An overhead kick from outside the area for Boro against Swansea in the FA Cup the season before made sure that moment was relived every Saturday night in the opening sequence of the show.

"It was the first of its kind," he said. "Everybody followed the trend."

"You're a superstar now if you do it, or if you score from the halfway line you're on £80,000 a week. Ordinary players think they're World Cup players now, they've got the money and we haven't."

"It's one of those things; if you look back in anger you'll get bitter, you have to move on."

He didn't manage an overhead kick in a Gills shirt, but there was one goal in particular that is synonymous with Cochrane.

Bristol Rovers were the visitors to Priestfield on December 29, 1984. The Rovers keeper miscued a clearance to Cochrane on the halfway line, and after neatly controlling the ball he chipped it straight back into the top corner.

"I would love to have it on video, it's one that I thought was a bit special for me," he said.

"It should have been goal of the season."

With all that talent it's no surprise he was capped at international level, but just two of his 26 caps came while he was with the Gills, against Scotland in December 1983, and Finland in May 1984.

The European Championships is a painful reminder of what might have been for Cochrane who enjoyed career highs and lows with Northern Ireland.

A hamstring injury just weeks before the 1982 World Cup ruled him out of the tournament and he had to make do with a postcard from his team mates, after appearing in all but two of the qualifiers.

"I pulled a hamstring in France and couldn't get it right," he said. "I would have gone, that's the most disappointing part."

"I don't think it can grate on your mind, it's just a memory you don't care to think about."

"They sent me a postcard and wished me all the best, and they shared the money out - it was nice of them to do that."

While his impact on that tournament will never be known, his goal against England at Wembley two years earlier in the Home Nations went a long way to helping his country win the competition for the first time in 66 years.

If ever he forgets what impact that had he need only take a walk in the village where he was born.

To mark that moment a mural was painted, also depicting the last goal to be scored for Northern Ireland against England in 2005 by David Healy, who grew up just five doors along from Cochrane.

"That's one of my better memories," he said. "You dream of going to Wembley and scoring against England."

"That was a big thing for me coming from where I come from to score against England."

"You find it a bit daunting, but you're happy in your memories, nowadays it doesn't seem to matter, the modern game is outdating you."

After leaving Gillingham he went on to play with Dallas in the US and had brief spells at Hartlepool and Millwall.

He then had another dabble with international football in the early 90s, this time coaching the Saudi Arabian military side.

The team was gearing up for a tournament against fellow gulf nations and wanted professional help.

"I saw an ad in the paper about coaches going, they invited me to London and next thing I knew I was in Saudi," he said.

"The Gulf War nullified the training, we got bits and pieces done which was good, it never happened because of the war."

"I had an Egyptian interpreter but football is a common language, you just have to shuffle it about a bit."

"I would have gone back but the company lost the tender, so that was it."

Management is something Cochrane is keen to get back into after acquiring his A licence, and has so far only taken the reigns at Glenavon in the Irish Premier League where he stayed for six months.

In the meantime he is back in Middlesbrough part-time coaching in the community.

Dobriskey wins place as four more in Olympic squad

FOUR more Kent athletes have been selected to represent Great Britain at the Olympics.

As widely expected sprint sensation Adam Gemili, and hurdler Jack Green had their places confirmed, 1,500m runner Lisa Dobriskey clinched her place in the final trial event in Birmingham.

The Ashford-born runner has battled against blood clots on her lungs in the last year, but recovered in time to finish second in the 1,500m trial a week before the selection deadline.

Kat Driscoll from Chatham will be Team GB's only representative in the trampoline event after winning the North West Gala event in June.

The 28-year-old said: "It has been a long selection process for trampoline, so to be able to come out on top and be named part of Team GB is an incredible feeling and a huge honour."

"I've dreamt of competing at an Olympic games since I was a child and continually told my Dad that I would be there one day as part of Team GB."

Gemili from Dartford will go head-to-head with the fastest men in the world in the 100m and 4x100m relay. It has been a whirlwind six months for the 18-year-old who four years ago was paying just a passing interest in athletics.

"My first Olympic memory was Beijing if I'm honest," Gemili said following Tuesday's official team announcement. "I remember the 100m but I wasn't too much into athletics. I've seen it since on Youtube and I've been doing my research."

"I feel privileged that I've earned a place and I will be lining up against the likes of Usain Bolt and Asafa Powell, potentially anything can happen in that race and it feels really good."

"I will be running against the best guys in the world and hopefully I'll run the times they run and maybe even better it. Just to be there on the day will be amazing."

"I'm improving a lot and that 10.08 was quite scrappy, it wasn't my best race. I've made a lot of improvements and changes and if I keep improving then we can hopefully see some quicker times."

He became fastest British runner this year, and the second ever fastest for his age behind Dwain Chambers after smashing his personal best and the Olympic A qualification time in Regensburg, in Germany.

Green, 21, from Maidstone, claimed his place in the 400m hurdles and 4x400m hurdles after running the qualification time last month.

JOY: Dobriskey will run in the 1,500m for GB

Allen vows evolution not revolution as he takes over

greg.miles@archant.co.uk

AFTER nearly two months of speculation Martin Allen was finally confirmed as Gillingham manager this week.

The 46-year-old has long been favourite to succeed Andy Hessenthaler who stepped down in May - despite mixed feelings from Gills fans.

After being unveiled at Priestfield on Thursday in one of the worst kept secrets in football, he will now face the task of turning around a depleted team with instructions to aim for promotion ringing in his ears from chairman Paul Scally.

Allen said: "The opportunity to come here came up earlier in the summer so I spoke to the chairman and he told me his plans.

"We had a few meetings and he expressed his wishes to climb higher.

"It's a different situation coming to a club where a manager has done well, so it's not exactly major chances that are needed.

"We just need to tinker around a little bit."

Paul Scally was delighted, meanwhile, to get his man.

He said: "Martin was always the most outstanding candidate.

"We met him on a number of occasions and we were very excited by his vision."

His appointment will be seen as a risky one by many with his track record in recent years showing a lack of staying power, but one thing is for sure he will get whatever side is put in front of him fired up.

The man nicknamed Mad Dog, due to a habit

HOT SEAT: Martin Allen has been told by Gillingham's chairman Paul Scally to aim for promotion in his playing days of foaming at the mouth, was unemployed after his successful rescue mission at Barnet at the end of the season.

He was brought in for the final three games of the season with the aim of keeping the Underhill outfit in the Football League, a feat he achieved on the final day of the season.

He has been among the top names linked with the job alongside Mark Robson who was given the job at Allen's former club Barnet, Steve Tilson, and Keith Millen.

Steve Claridge has also been in the frame for the job in the last few weeks.

Biggest crowd of the season ready for South Africans' visit

KENT will play South Africa in front of a bumper crowd next week in a warm-up game for the tourists ahead matches against England.

The three-day match at the St Lawrence Ground in Canterbury against a host of star names has boosted ticket sales for the county which chief executive Jamie Clifford believes could be the biggest of the season.

The action starts on Friday and is the second match for the South Africans, who play Somerset at Taunton in a two-day game starting on Sunday, July 10.

Clifford is relishing the chance to see the second best team in the world play, and hopes fans feel the same.

"Ticket sales are very good, we are anticipating the biggest crowd of the season for the Friday on the first day," he said.

"They will have just arrived and will be getting ready for the first test, so it's got a very high profile, and lots of people want to see them as soon as they can.

"South Africa have got some big names that people want to see, it might be the last chance to see people like Jacques Kallis.

"The Tests against England are as good as sold out, if not they're not far short.

"It's great when the ground is full because it has a great atmosphere, and it's nice to get the big names playing. The England series is going to be a play-off for the best team in the world."

South Africa will play England in three tests at the Oval on July 19, Headingley, August 2, and Lord's on August 16, before they play five one-day internationals from August 24, to September 5.

Hill hoping for triple joy in BSB at his favourite track

TOMMY HILL currently leads the British Superbike Championships and is hoping to lengthen his lead at one of his favourite circuits.

The Swan Yamaha rider from Beckenham races at the Cheshire circuit this weekend and is currently six points ahead of Sheppey's Shane Byrne in the overall standings following his double podium finish at Scotland's Knockhill circuit last time out.

And he is eager for a repeat performance at his favourite track, where he secured pole position, a victory and a second place earlier in the season in May.

There is a great chance for Hill to increase his lead in the standings with three races taking place this weekend, but he is taking one race at a time.

Hill said: "I always look forward to Oulton Park as it is one of my favourite circuits and after two very strong finishes at Knockhill we are coming in to the weekend hoping to stick the Swan Yamaha back on the top step of the podium again.

"We have three chances this weekend but I am taking it one race at a time as everyone is pretty even and we just need to keep pushing on as a team and looking for those race wins and podium credits.

"There are lots of riders who are going to be up there fighting but I am just focused on trying to get three wins for Swan Yamaha so we can add to our tally before the Showdown."

EXCITED: Adam Ball hopes to lead out England

Captaining England at the World Cup a major step in Ball's career

ADAM Ball is relishing the challenge of leading England into the under-19 World Cup in Australia next month.

Ball and Kent team mate Daniel Bell-Drummond were named in the provisional squad in June for the tournament and were expected to be named in the final squad that was announced on Friday.

Ball has captained the side for the past year including at the Quadrangular series against Australia in April, while Bell-Drummond has been a consistent performer with the bat and played a major part in England's success in that tournament.

The 19-year-old from Bexley has made nine first class appearances for Kent after making his debut last season against Gloucestershire, and has featured in the CB40 and t20 campaign this year.

"It's a massive honour playing for your country, it's a massive honour in itself, but being given the captaincy is another big step in my career," he said.

"It was quite a big challenge doing it for the first time. I felt I was capable enough, but did have my doubts about how it may affect my game. My relationship with Keysey (Rob Key) has grown over the last couple of years. I get on quite well with him, and whenever I need any advice he's always there.

"It's quite a tough job because you have got to find your own way of doing things."

England play their first game against defending champions Australia on August 11, before matches against Ireland the following day, and Nepal on August 16. Ball has pinpointed the hosts and Pakistan as the teams to be wary of.

"I think the main ones are Australia, and Pakistan are a very strong side as well, they have lots of talented players."

The tournament takes place in familiar surroundings of Queensland where Ball and the rest of the squad played in the Quadrangular series against Australia, India, and New Zealand.

They crashed out to eventual winners India in the semi-finals, despite winning all three of their group games.

He said: "I think we have made progress from going to Australia last time, we have got a very good chance, there are a few new faces in the squad, so I'm excited to see how they get on."
